Germans Sank U. S. Ship, Says Rescue Captain

Craft Torpedoed, He States Specifically; She Was Sent Down In American Waters

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Word from survivors that the United States freighter Robin Moor was "torpedoed by a German submarine" reached Washington last night while officials, gravely concerned that America might be facing a "war incident," were trying to determine from unconfirmed reports if the vessel had actually been sent to the bottom by a Nazi U-boat.

Capt. Waldemar Lucio Pereira, of the rescuing steamer Ozorio, radioed the Associated Press as he steamed toward Pernambuco (Brazil) with 11 survivors that they told him the Robin Moor met a watery grave May 21 at German hands.

The Ozorio, with the 11 survivors she picked up at sea, is due at Pernambuco at 9 o'clock tonight.

In American Waters

The White House requested that the public reserve judgment until the facts are established, but it was officially stated that the New York-to-Cape Town vessel was "well within American waters" when she sank, carrying 8 passengers and 38 officers and crewmen.

Official action awaited the Ozorio's arrival at Pernambuco, on Brazil's easternmost promontory, and State Department officials declined to comment on the radiogram to the Associated Press on the ground that they could express no reaction to an unofficial message of that type.

Before receipt of Capt. Pereira's message that the Robin Moor was "torpedoed by a German submarine," he had radioed to shore simply that the vessel was "torpedoed," without mentioning the identity of the craft that fired the missile.

Another bit of evidence was a final announcement by the United States Maritime Commission that, according to their information, the Robin Moor was torpedoed. The commission said that operators of the Ozorio have advised the Seas Shipping Co., owners of the Robin Moor, that the American vessel was sent to the bottom by a torpedo May 21, about 950 miles northeast of St. Roque, Brazil.

1915 Sinking Recalled

Officials disguised only thinly their concern over the sinking.

It was impossible to predict what steps the United States might take if the guilt of a Nazi U-boat is established. It was recalled, however, that the sinking of the United States steamer William T. Frye on February 28, 1915, by a German craft—also in the South Atlantic—was the first of the depredations on American shipping that led directly to this country's entry into the World War.

The State Department counted on interviews with the master of the Ozorio and with the survivors, however, to accumulate a full factual picture of the fate that befell the Robin Moor.

The Robin Moor, a craft of 5,000 tons, sailed from New York for Capetown May 8 with a general cargo. According to the Maritime Rangoon.—One thing is as plain in the present Far Eastern situation as the rusty corrugated iron roof that bakes under the heavy metallic Burmese sun outside the hotel window as I write this. That is that an American traveling in the East studying the strategical, economic and political situation must distinguish between the pretexts for the war we are arming for out here and the basic causes of this possible war.

If we fight Japan the pretext for fighting will be that Japan has attacked the Phillipines, or the Dutch East Indies or British Malaya.

But the real reason for fighting Japan will be that if she moves south in the Pacific she will be attacking the control of the world supply of rubber. Four-fifths of the world's rubber supply comes from the area Japan would be moving into and it would take at least seven years to build up rubber production anywhere else to replace the area Japan would

British Take Damascus And Beirut

Many Vichy Troops Continue Deserting, London Advices Say

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, June 10.—Strongly supported by the Royal Air Force and the Royal Australian Air Force, the Allied forces have occupied Beirut, Syria's chief port, and Damascus, the Syrian capital, according to reports which reached London tonight.

The Allied forces which had entered the outskirts of Damascus, the ancient city of Biblical fame, which is still one of the chief centers of the Middle East, were believed to have advanced from Palestine in one column and from Trans-Jordan in another, resulting in a pincers movement. The troops which had entered Beirut had followed the coast road from Palestine, it was said.

There were reports of two Arab divisions penetrating Syria from Iraq, under the command of white officers, but these could not be substantiated in London.

[Lines were reported holding south of Damascus and Beirut, an Associated Press dispatch from Vichy said. French sources added that French planes had taken off from North African bases to bolster Syrian defense.]

Large number of French troops continued to desert the Vichy standard, held aloft by Gen. Henri Fernand Dentz, high commissioner in Syria, reports here indicated.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle declared in a statement today that 63 officers in Syria were serving with the Free French forces, and that 200 others had been sent to prison for defying Vichy's orders.

[Associated Press dispatches from Cairo said small British naval parties landed on the Lebanese coast to seize control of bridges and other vital points ahead of the Al-

Crete Defense Profitable —Churchill

Battle Worthwhile For Part It Played In Stemming Drive To Egypt, He Avers

By the United Press

London, June 10.—Prime Minister Churchill, lashing out at critics of his administration, told Commons today that Britain is taking "very great risks" at home to throw her resources into the Middle East battle.

He reported that British and Free French forces are meeting with success in their lightning campaign to drive the "German poison" from Syria, but admitted that the empire had lost 15,000 men —almost half her defending force— in the "somber and ferocious" Battle of Crete. Churchill stressed that the battle was well worth fighting for the lessons it taught for the defense of Britain and the role it played in the defense of the Nile Valley.

Churchill made his statement before a packed and critical House. The parliamentary expert of the authoritative British Press Association said he spoke for 45 minutes before the mood of his audience became "fully sympathetic."

Drawing an encouraging picture of the British situation in the vital Mediterranean war zone, Churchill said the advance of British and Free French troops into Syria was progressing favorably and meeting little opposition.

He warned against premature jubilation, however, because a German offensive against Suez across the Egyptian desert from Libya remained a great danger to the empire's life line.

In his extensive statement on the war situation, Churchill said:

1. The policy of the Vichy government has become one of "utter subservience" to Germany and the situation in Syria was "almost gone" to German infiltration before the Allies marched in.

2. "We have no territorial designs on Syria or anywhere else in French territory. We seek no colonies or advantages for ourselves in this war. . . . We shall do all in our power to restore the freedom, independence and rights of France."

3. Imperial losses in Crete were 15,000 men killed, wounded, taken prisoner or missing. The admiralty revealed yesterday that 17,000 were evacuated.

4. The battle of the Atlantic is being well maintained and apart from serious losses in the Mediterranean, "the month of May was the best we have had in some time in the Atlantic."

(5) The monthly average output of guns and heavy tanks in the first quarter of 1941 was 50 per cent greater than for the last quarter of 1940. But, he added, Britain is still "incomparably inferior" to Germany in antiaircraft guns.

(6) The British chiefs of staffs miscalculated the defensive possibilities of Crete and thought they could protect the island with 25,000 to 30,000 men despite the lack of air support.

Mussolini Defies U. S. To Declare War

Terms of Settlement Reached In Cleveland Aluminum Strike; Plane Walkout Ends on Coast

2 Call Metal Strike Chief Red; Balint Denies It, but Admits He's an Alien and Ex-Convict

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Alex Balint, leader of the C. I. O. workers who struck Monday at the Aluminum Co. of America's plant in Cleveland, was pictured before the Dies Committee yesterday as an alien, a former convict and a Communist.

The acting chairman of the Dies Committee, Representative Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, noted the "deadly parallel" between the strike at the North American Aircraft Co. plant and the one at the Aluminum Co.'s plant.

In the North American case, it was brought out that Elmer Freitag, head of the C. I. O. union of aircraft workers at Inglewood, Calif., was a registered Communist in 1938.

Struck Before End of Negotiation

Freitag came to Washington to appear as a negotiator before the Defense Mediation Board. Before the Mediation Board had a chance to tackle the case, the aircraft workers were ordered to strike. The excuse given was that the Mediation Board was "stalling."

Balint, Cleveland regional director of the C. I. O. Die Casters Union, also came here to appear before the Mediation Board. While he was here, the aluminum strike started before the board could tackle the dispute. The excuse given was that the Mediation Board was "stalling."

In both cases, a stoppage of articles important to America's national defense was involved—bombers at the North American plant and aircraft parts and other defense material at the American Aluminum Co.'s plant.

Both strikes followed warnings by the Dies Committee that Communist-dominated unions were not interested in settlements, that what they sought was agitation, turmoil and a stoppage of work.

Yesterday's hearing before the Dies Committee was hurriedly called, and only a few spectators were present. Balint, who came here last week to appear before the Mediation Board, showed up at the committee room with his attorney, Edward Lamb, of Toledo. Two witnesses were brought from Cleveland by airplane.

Admits Serving Time in Prison

Balint, called before the committee, admitted that he was a Hungarian who had been denied his final citizenship papers. He also admitted that he had served 11 months in the Pontiac Reformatory on a charge of auto theft.

He denied that he was a Communist, but steadfastly refused to say that he thought it was a bad thing to have Communists or Nazi Bundists serving as officers of American trade unions.

Two witnesses testified that Balint had told them he was a Communist. Mrs. Vera Apergis, who was president of a C. I. O. union made up of WPA needleworkers in Cleveland two years ago, said Balint showed her

Plant-Seizure Bill Assured Senate Passage

Vote Likely Today On Rider Condemning Defense Strikes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday pushed the Connally plant seizure amendment to the brink of passage then debated a broad condemnation of strikes in defense industries as "contrary to sound public policy."

The rider denouncing defense strikes, in the same language used by the Senate against "sit downs" in 1937, was pressed by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

Minor Changes in Bill

Byrd asked for a record vote on his antistrike declaration after the Connally authorization ratifying Government's taking over of strike-bound industries ran a gantlet of amendments, assuring approval.

A fight developed on the Byrd amendment, but final action was expected today.

Before the Senate recessed, Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, moved to amend the Byrd proposal to call for "wholehearted acceptance of the principles of collective bargaining" in defense cooperation between Government, management and labor.

Connally Makes Change

The Connally plan, approving the President's action in taking over the North American airplane factory and authorizing other such seizures, received several minor changes as it was sped toward passage.

They were:

An amendment by Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, providing that Government-occupied plants "shall be returned to the owners whenever the President determines that such plant will be privately operated in a manner consistent with the needs

Union Would Get Rise; Stoppage Continues In Six Detroit Plants

(Other Strike Stories on Pages 2 and 3.)

The National Defense Mediation Board last night announced an agreement to end a strike tie-up of five Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Co. of America, after a War Department official had warned that the stoppage was threatening to bring all warplane production in the country to a dead halt. The agreement will be submitted to strikers for ratification this afternoon.

Alex Balint, leader of the Cleveland strikers, was pictured before the Dies Committee as an alien, a former convict and a Communist. Balint denied he was a Communist but his testimony was disputed by two other witnesses.

At the same time the C. I. O. strike at the Army-occupied California plant of the North American Aviation Co. completely collapsed after strikers decided to return to their jobs without waiting for a Government reply to conditions which they had first attached to their proposal to resume work.

While the Cleveland aluminum strike apparently was settled, six plants of the Bohn Aluminum and Brass Corporation, of Detroit, were closed down by a walkout of the C. I. O. United Auto Workers. The Mediation Board called a hearing on the latter strike for next Monday.

A tie-up of the great plant of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation in California was threatened as A. F. of L. machinists voted through the day on authorizing a strike if negotiations fail. All-night negotiations on a new contract were ordered by the disputants.

The Senate pushed the Connally plant-seizure proposal to the brink of passage, then debated a broad condemnation of strikes in defense industries as "contrary to sound public policy."

A Government mediator offered to help settle the strike of tugboat officers that has kept tugs idle in Baltimore harbor for two days.

C. I. O. Strikers Return to Jobs At Plane Plant

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, June 10.—C. I. O. strikers filtered back to work at the North American aviation plant tonight with the Army still in charge of the factory with its $196,000,000 backlog of warplane orders.

About 1,000 night-shift workers entered the plant after a mass meeting voted the back-to-work movement based on three conditions.

One of these—that the men be allowed to march back in a body—was rejected by Lieut. Col. Charles E. Bradshaw, whom President Roosevelt placed in charge in ordering the Army to take over the struck factory.

6,866 Return to Work

Each man was subjected to close examination, hence the return to work was slow.

"The Army is not bargaining with the workers," Col. Branshaw said. "They can come back individually. They have been invited to do so as patriotic citizens."

He reported that 6,866 of the plant's more than 11,500 employes had returned to work on various shifts since 3,500 bayonet-wielding soldiers dispersed picket lines yesterday morning.

The normal day shift totals about 6,000 production workers and 1,000 office, engineering and other non-production employes. Normal night production force is about 3,000. The remainder work the early shift.

No Discrimination

Recommended by West Coast C. I. O. leader Harry Bridges, the back-to-work agreement of the hold-out strikers was reached after several hours' discussion of a resolution which finally was boiled down to the three essential demands: That they be permitted to return in a group, that there be no discrimination because of union activities and that they be permitted to resume negotiations on their demand for 75 cents an hour minimum wages and 10 cents an hour blanket wage

Board Effects Alcoa, C. I. O. Understanding

Confronted with an Army warning that warplane production was facing a complete halt because of aluminum strikes, the National Defense Mediation Board last night negotiated an agreement to end the C. I. O. tie-up of five Cleveland plants of the Aluminum Corporation of America.

Still in its hands, however, was the walkout of the C. I. O. United Auto Workers at six plants of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Corporation, Detroit, and the board summoned both sides in that dispute to meet here Monday.

The Cleveland strike settlement was subject to ratification by a mass meeting of the strikers, to be held today. However, Edward Chayfitz, national secretary of the union, urged by phone that the strikers ratify the terms.

Hope to Reopen Today

Judge Walter Stacy, chairman of the board panel, who announced the agreement, said it was hoped to resume production at the plants today. The hope was based on expectation that the union membership would vote on the agreement last night. However, the action was delayed until this afternoon.

The settlement provides an increase of one-cent an hour, 72 cents to 73 cents, in the minimum wage and grants a 3-cent bonus to worker on second (night) shift and 5 cent an hour bonus to those night workers on the third shift. The workers had sought a 75-cent minimum and a general increase of 4½ cents an hour.

Members of the panel, in addition to Judge Stacy, were Emil Rieve, representing labor, and Cy Ching for employers.

Strike Called Suddenly

Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O. and a member of the Mediation Board, also participated actively in the peace effort and was credited by board officials with having done much to bring the disputing groups into agreement. He con-

U. S. Warns Buy Coal Now, Avoid Shortage

By the Associated Press

Anticipating "very grave danger of a shortage" of coal next winter, the Government urged householders throughout the country last night to "buy winter coal now."

At the same time Secretary Ickes removed the qualification "probably" from forecasts of an oil shortage and said definitely that Easterners "will have to get along with less gasoline for their cars and probably less oil to heat their homes." No indication was given, however, as to when restrictions would be imposed.

Both coal and oil shortages are threatened not by lack of supplies but by the demands the defense program is making on transportation facilities. The coal shortage may be avoided, officials said, if the campaign for summer buying succeeds.

Ickes, as defense petroleum coordinator, proposed in a formal statement that "all of us" reduce gasoline consumption:

"1. By reducing our driving speeds.

"2. By refraining from nonessential driving.

"3. By less hasty getaways in city traffic, and

"4. By adjusting our cars for maximum fuel efficiency so that no gasoline will be belched

Leading Stocks Climb $1 to $3

New York, June 10 (AP).—Leading stocks jumped $1 to $3 each today in the biggest trading session Wall Street had seen for five weeks.

Market operators said Washington's firm stand against defense strikes, as exemplified in the North American Aviation plant, touched off today's action. Mussolini's speech of defiance was ignored by traders.

Income Surtax Voted to Start At Present Base

The House Ways and Means Committee voted yesterday to start the new normal and surtax individual income tax rates at the present exemption level, turning thumbs down on all base broadening proposals.

The committee acted to sustain the present $2,000 exemptions for married persons and $800 for single individuals before reaching any definite agreement on rates.

The policy decision was a victory for the Treasury which has steadfastly opposed any lowering of exemptions, contending costs of collections in lower paid groups would be higher than the revenue yield.

It was the second time the Treasury had been sustained on tax policy in formulation of the $3,500,000,000 tax program after it had suffered a resounding defeat when the committee rejected Treasury

Sentiment for Banning Strikes On Defense Work Increasing

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 10.—As Washington officials grapple with new defense strikes—just a fortnight after President Roosevelt's declaration of a national emergency—a Nation-wide survey of American voters shows those with opinions 4 to 1 in favor of the extreme step of forbidding defense strikes altogether.

To most United States labor leaders and to many liberals, the outlawing of strikes of any kind would appear as a catastrophe. Last week the liberal Council for Democracy took full-page advertising space in American newspapers to ask that the strike problem be solved—but that it be solved without resort to sweeping anti-strike legislation.

How many Americans believe that even the latter measure might be preferable to further work stoppages, however, is indicated in the following test:

"Should the Government forbid strikes in industries manufacturing materials for our national defense program," the Institute asked a Nation-wide cross-section, "or should the workers in those industries continue to have the right to go on strike?"

Seventy-six per cent said defense strikes should be forbid-

Dairy Farmer Urges Extension Of Milk Program for Needy

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

"By all means let us keep up the surplus milk program for deserving needy and extend its benefits, if possible. The farmer with vision can see that, even should that policy entail a small financial sacrifice on his part, he will be the gainer in the long run through having helped increase consumption."

The man who spoke those words yesterday was not a social worker expounding theory. He was a dairy farmer himself, one of those same farmers who might be called upon to accept a little revenue cut if low-cost milk is to be extended to all of Washington's underprivileged.

Eugene Casey is his name. He operates three dairy farms above Rockville, Md., shipping 500 gallons of milk into Washington daily. He has between 160 and 180 milk cows. He is a member of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

He is also special executive assistant to President Roosevelt, performing the duties of liaison officer between the White House and Department of Agriculture.

Solicted for comment on efforts now being made to obtain a cent-a-glass milk program for undernourished school children and make the existing nickel-a-quart project more workable and inclusive, Casey left no doubt as to his position.

"First, of course, you must make certain chiselers don't get this low-ferred with both union and management representatives while the panel was in recess.

The strike was called suddenly Monday morning despite the fact that the dispute was already in the hands of the Mediation Board. Some union officials declared the negotiations were "getting nowhere," and the men were ordered out.

There were reports last night that the Bohn strike also was on the verge of settlement. It was said that the latter strikers were willing to return to work if the company will make negotiated wage increases retroactive to Monday. However, company officials refused that offer.

Word Came Too Late

Some Bohn strike officials said they did not receive the Mediation Board's request to delay the walkout in time to avert the tie-up which had been set for yesterday morning, before Secretary of Labor Perkins certified the dispute to the board.

A ranking War Department official late yesterday afternoon had painted a gloomy picture of the plane production outlook in the face of these two aluminum stoppages.

"Prolongation of either of these strikes," he said, "means that production of such essential aircraft components as engines and propellers will be stopped completely. This will result in a total cessation of all aircraft construction."

Bearing out this forecast was a telegram received by the War Department from the Curtiss-Wright Aircraft Co. Signed by C. E. Warner, of the Curtiss Airplane Division, Buffalo plant, it called attention to the Aluminum Co. of America strike, and said:

"This will stop production of wheels and will shut this plant down by the end of this week. Anything you can do to help will be appreciated."

The plants of the Aluminum Co. and its subsidiary, the American Magnesium Co., are the principal source of aluminum castings, forgings, and extrusions in the United States. They are used not only in aircraft engines, propellers and wheels but also in much ordinance equipment.

The Bohn Corporation is the sole source of the bearings used in the majority of American bombers, and also produces aluminum and magnesium molds and castings for warplanes.

A general 10-cent-an-hour pay boost is being demanded by the 4,000 strikers at the Bohn plants, 85 per cent of whose production was said to be for defense. Simon D. DenUyl, company secretary-treasurer, told the Associated Press at Detroit that wages rates were frozen in a company-union contract running until April, 1942.

Strike Called Authorized

"I frankly believe," DenUyl was quoted as saying, "that our refusal to grant the increase was welcome news to those who are not interested in the welfare of our employes but are interested in delaying the country's defense program."

Leo Lamotte, regional C. I. O.-U. A. W. director, was quoted as saying "this is an authorized strike—not to be confused with the situation in California," referring to the strike at the North American Aviation Co.

Anothre defense-hetarding strike was reported from Cleveland by the Associated Press, where the C. I. O.-U. A. W. walked out at the Lamson & Session Co., makers of nuts and bolts. The plant employs 550, but said it had not been informed of any grievance. Police said they were told the strike was due to the discharge of a shop steward.

The Government's strike policy prompted most of the questions asked of President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday.

The President told reporters that in the case of the Government's taking over the North American Aviation plant, or in other cases that might eventuate, the private owners would get the property back as soon as possible.

He said he had discussed the pay question at the aviation plant, which the Army took over Monday, with Secretary Stimson, Attorney General Jackson and Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office Production Management, earlier in the day.

The regular scale of pay will be paid this week, Mr. Roosevelt said, with the understanding that if mediation efforts result in boosting the wage scale, the increase will be retroactive to May 1.

Asked whether he thought any similar cases might eventuate, Mr. Roosevelt said it was hoped not. As for strikes at five aluminum plants in Cleveland and six in Detroit, the Chief Executive said they were in the hands of the Defense Mediation Board, which has submitted no recommendation or report.

He said Harvey W. Brown, president of the A. F. L. Machinists Union, would ask his executive council tomorrow to authorize him to order back to work some 1,500 to 1,700 machinists on strike against 11 shipyards in the San Francisco Bay area. The yards have orders for 'about $500,000,000 in defense shipping.

In response to a question, the President said he believed no C. I. O. machinists were involved in the shipyard dispute.

Mr. Roosevelt did not care to talk much about his conference with Stimson, Hillman and Jackson. But he did say he did not know whether the Government would pay out the money for this week's pay roll at the North American plant or whether the company would do so. If the Government did, he said, arrangements naturally would be made for reimbursement.

"In efforts to work out an agreement," a reporter asked, "will the bargaining be with the C. I. O. union."

The President said it would be with Richard Frankensteen, head of the C. I. O. United Aoutomobile Workers' aviation division, and not with union officials ousted by Frankensteen.

Mr. Roosevelt dismissed as too "iffy" a question whether men on strike who were reclassified for Selective Service could go back to work nad revert to their original deferred classification. And he turned aside as too general an inquiry whether employes jeopardized chances for higher wages by forcing the Government to take over a plant.

"Would you give your views on the legislative authority for you to do what you did in the North American strike?" a reporter requested.

Mr. Roosevelt laughed and said he thought he would not as things were going along pretty well.

As for reports that he had told the Cabinet that troops might take over next a plant of the American Potash and Chemical Corporation at Trona, Calif., the President said he had never heard of the matter, of the plant or of Trona.

Calls C.I.O. Leader Communist increases.

Col. Branshaw alheady had said there would be no discrimination. Continuation of negotiations and mediation had been pledged by President Roosevelt.

Wyndham Mortimer, union executive, said the mass meeting first agreed to demand that troops be removed from the factory as one condition of the return but that this was abandoned in conference later.

"I told them it would be silly to tell the Army what to do," Mortimer said. "The best thing for them to do is to return to work immediately."

When interviewers asked Branshaw when the troops would be removed, he said they would evacuate "when and only when the United States Government decides the need for them no longer exists."

[In Washington, President oRosevelt said that the Government, in bargaining with the union, would deal with Richard T. Frankensteen, head of the C. I. O. -U- A. W. aviation division, who on Sunday suspended local officers of the union. Mortimer and other officials who sided with the strikers. Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference that the bargaining would not be with the officials ousted by Frankensteen.—Editor's note.]

The strikers at one point in their mass meeting shouted approval of a negotiating committee threat to call sympathetic walkouts "first at Vultee and then at all other aircraft factories until every national defense factory in Southern California is tied up."

This, however, as in the case of the demand for removal of the troops, was rejected during drafting of the final resolution.

Members of the negotiating committee, including Mortimer, were suspended Sunday by Frankensteen, whose recommendation that the men return to work had been interrupted by boos at a mass meeting that day.

Frankensteen was accused by local union officials of strike-breaking tactics.

Today at San Diego, James Dickerson, international representative of the C. I. O., wired Frankensteen that he was resigning because "I can no longer support the position of the international union. Opposition to unauthorized strikes is one thing. Strike-breaking is another."

Union Drafts Pact With Consolidated

BULLETIN

San Diego, Calif., June 10. (AP). A proposed contract was drafted by the Consolidated Aircraft Corp. and A. F. L. machinists tonight for submission to the union membership Thursday. The development came while union employes of the company still were voting on a strike proposal.

The machinists are seeking a union shop, an increase in the minimum hourly wage from 50 to 60 cents with an automatic boost to 75 cents after six months' service, job classification and seniority clauses.

Plant-Seizure Bill Assured Senate Passage

of the national defense."

An amendment by La Follette, giving the Government the right to take over in the case of a lockout as well as a strike.

Connally, meanwhile, amended his own bill to permit seizure of a defense plant if a strike is either "threatened" or in progress. He asked power for the President for the duration of the unlimited national emergency.

Selective Service Act changes, used as a vehicle for the Connally plan, earlier were approved by the Senate without opposition. These give President Roosevelt power to defer military training for men who reach their twenty-eighth birthday by next July 1, or July 1 of any subsequent year, without having been inducted into the armed forces. Final passage will await action on the Connally amendments.

While the Senate was debating, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson went before the House Military Affairs Committee to indorse both the Connally scheme for plant requisitioning and the companion House bill by Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Committee.

Patterson Urges Speed

Patterson said the two bills would "all the needs as the War Department sees it." War Department witness on the broader draft property bill, he said the Army wants a general requisitioning measure enacted, but preferred that it not delay the Conally or Vinson proposals.

The Undersecretary of War said the Army took over the Inglewood, Calif., plant "under the constitutional powers of the President as commander in chief of the Army and Navy which seems to include responsibility for equipping the Army. But we would prefer express statutory authority."

In the Senate, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, acting majority leader, said the Connally amendment was not to be confused with the draft property legislation, which will be considered later on its own merits. Byrnes stressed that the President needed legislation to requisition such items as private planes and yachts if needed for defense, but said this should be dealt with in the broader measure. Raw materials needed for defense, German war patents and other defense resources also could be commandeered under the general requisitioning bill.

Two amendments were rejected as the Connally plan was speeded. One of these by Senator Bell (Republican), of Minnesota, proposed machinery for comprehensive defense labor policy, would have transferred the Labor Department's conciliation service temporarily to the National Mediation Board and would have required 30 days' notice of intention to have a strike or lockout. Also defeated was an amendment by Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, asking power for the President to induct into the armed forces the employes of a strike-bound defense plant taken over.

Byrd's call for Congressional condemnation of defense strikes brought a warm indorsement from Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, and a sharp attack by Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah. Waving a newspaper reporting the six new aluminum plant strikes, Bailey shouted:

"If we are on the verge of war and can't stop these defense strikes, then we ought to turn tail and flee like rats." He said "the American people will know what to do" if defense strikes menace this Nation's security.

Murdock called the Byrd proposal a "pat on the back for industrialists and a kick in the face for labor."

Two Call Metal Strike Chief a Communist; Balint Denies It

his Communist Party membership book. Balint at the time, she said, was her C. I. O. superior, and shared an office with her. She said he moved an American flag from his end of the office so as to make room for stacks of Communist literature.

"Did he tell you you would never get anywhere unless you joined the Communist Party?" Mrs. Apergis was asked.

"Yes," she said.

"Are you positive that what Mr. Balint showed you was his Communist Party membership book?"

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Apergis. "He wanted to show me that he was in good standing."

Andrew Balunek, who said he worked with Balint in the Republic Steel Co. plant in Cleveland, and who now works in the aluminum plant, testified that Balint had told him innumerable times that he was a Communist.

"He said to me, 'Why don't you join and get the jump like I did?'" Balunek testified.

Promised Good Job

"Did he tell you that you would get a good job if you joined the Communist Party?" Dr. J. B. Matthews, research director for the Dies Committee, asked.

"Yes, a dozen times," the witness said.

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, asked Balunek if he thought unions were a good thing.

"I believe in a good union, but I don't believe in a Communist union," Balunek said.

Balint infuriated Acting Chairman Starnes by his refusal to answer questions directly. Starnes observed that every answer Balint made was a speech. Balint's lawyer, Lamb, also aroused Starnes' ire.

Lamb, who last appeared before the committee as counsel for Sarah V. Montgomery, of the Peace Mobilization, frequently conferred with Balint after the latter was asked a question.

A fiery exchange took place between Lamb and Starnes at one point. Lamb said that he was trying to determine whether the hearing was being conducted in an American or un-American manner.

"You keep quiet," roared Starnes. "If you don't, you'll be thrown out of the committee room."

Lamb charged that an agent of the Dies Committee had rifled the effects of the men who had come here to appear before the Mediation Board. When Starnes pressed him on this, he said he had been "advised" that a Dies agents had done it.

Says Papers Were Held Up

Balint, a tall, broad-shouldered fellow in a green suit and sport shoes, said he was born in Hungary, April 12, 1912. He said he came to this country in 1920.

Asked if he were a citizen, he said he had read in the newspapers that his final papers had been held up. Asked why, he said:

"I take it that it was because of my action on behalf of the laboring people of this country."

In answer to other questions, he said he had been arrested when he was 16. He and a friend, he said, went on a vacation and two persons invited them to ride in an automobile. It turned out, he said, that the automobile was stolen and, since he had nobody to help him, he was sentenced to 11 months in the reformatory.

"When did you join the Communist Party?" Dr. Matthews asked.

Balint leaned over and conferred with Attorney Lamb. Then he said that he had never joined the Communist Party. When Matthews persisted, Balint exclaimed:

"I resent being questioned on Communism because I have never been interested in Communism. This is not anything but an attempt to smear our organization and the things we are fighting for."

Balint hesitated for some time before he admitted that he knew Mrs. Apergis.

"Did you ever show her your Communist Party membership book?" he was asked.

"That's a downright lie, he shouted. "I have never had a Communist Party book, and therefore I could not have shown it."

Representative Starnes and Representative Voorhis took turns trying to find out whether Balint thought Communists and Nazis ought to be admitted to American labor unions, and whether they ought to be allowed to hold union offices.

"I have no information about Communists or Nazis," he said.

The union's policy was to enroll all employes accepted by the employer, he said. As for himself, he was content to follow the C. I. O. constitution and policies.

"I simply asked you," Voorhis insisted at one point, "whether you think it is a bad thing for the union if Communist or Nazi Bund members are elected to positions of official trust?"

Whispers With Lawyer

"Just one minute," said Balint, "and I'll answer."

He went into a whispered conference with Attorney Lamb. This precipitated a row between Starnes and Lamb. Finally, when Balint got a chance to answer, he said:

"How I feel (about Communist and Nazis) doesn't matter. As an officer in the organization, I must follow out the policy of that organization."

"Would you oppose the election of a Communist of a Nazi?"

"It's always difficult to answer if questions," Balint replied.

Balint at this point shifted the line of testimony by demanding that the Dies Committee investigate a "Nazi tieup" in the American Aluminum Co.

Tells Sabotage Story

"Some one provoked this strike," he said. "We came here to settle the matter, and the strike was provoked."

Asked if he was implying that there had been Nazi sabotage at the plant, he said that about a month and a half ago there was a work stoppage at the Cleveland plant. After this, he said, a man named Haskell, whom he described as general superintendent of the plant, proceeded to wreck molds in the plant, and to smash the men's washroom and the windows. Then, he said, Haskell had a photographer make pictures of the debris.

"There's a real case of sabotage—breaking the molds," he said.

He said there was a tie-up between the Aluminum Co., and a big German firm.

"Here are 6,000 or 7,000 workers stepped on by a Nazi organization for 20 years," he continued.

He said he and the other negotiators came here and urged the Mediation Board to move up the time of the hearing, but that the Mediation Board refused to do this, and the walk-out followed.

The President's Day

By International News Service

LATE: Roosevelt kept his four horsemen on Capitol Hill waiting approximately 30 minutes yesterday morning while he rushed through preoffice work after oversleeping, but made up the time thrice over during one of the busiest days the White House has seen in weeks.

After three of the four Congressional leaders exited, jamming their hats on their heads, followed by bareheaded Vice President Wallace, Mr. Roosevelt's regular Tuesday lunch-and-conference sandwich arrived with Adviser Barney Baruch.

ENSEMBLE: An obviously rested President with something like a full ten hours' sleep under his belt was sartorially matched to the nines with a white shirt monogrammed on the sleeve with a blue F. D. R., light blue tie, seersucker trousers striped in blue, monogrammed gold and blue enamel cuff links. A man for comfort before custom—the seersucker suit jacket was discarded immediately for shirtsleeve-working.

TICKED: Off in the afternoon were appointments with John Blandford, jr., whose time was cut short to make way for a special conference with Secretary of War Stimson, Attorney General Jackson and OPM Labor Head Hillman and a brief, straight-away conference with the press.

RELATIVES: The exploring branch of the Roosevelt family—Leila Roosevelt and husband, Armand Denis—were guests of honor at a small, informal White House dinner last night. Others present were the former Governor of the Virgin Islands, Lawrence Cramer, and Mrs. Cramer, and Extra-man Harry Hopkins. Mrs. Roosevelt presided, and the flowers were from the White House rose gardens.

Jury Told How Soviet Controls All Business

A Communist propaganda machine, with controls in Moscow and its working parts in a swank New York office, was explored by a jury of the District Court yesterday.

Prosecuting three alleged Soviet agents for criminal conspiracy and failing to register with the State Department, Special Assistant Attorney General Benjamin Parker devoted the day's evidence to the Kremlin, or management, phase of the enterprise.

Called first by Parker, as an expert, was Dr. Vladmir Gsovski, professor of Russian law and history at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. Dr. Gsovski is also an assistant at the Library of Congress. He was once a Russian judge.

Speaking excellent English, but with an accent so hoarse that the 11 men and one woman jurors had to strain their ears, Dr. Gsovski identified a series of official Soviet law books.

Upon them the scholar founded his testimony that the law of the Soviet state welds all commercial and government undertakings together. This, he said, is a basic principle which is repeated again and again in official publications.

This union of government and business, said Dr. Gsovski, is so complete that the standing and tenure of business employes depends upon what kind of Communists they are. Workers and officials, he said, are chosen, removed and promoted on strictly political grounds.

Parker and his associates brought out testimony that this political, Communist control extended to Mezhniga, the State publishing house which is alleged to be the parent concern of a series of book companies operating in New York.

Through these companies, the Government says, the Kremlin flooded this country with propagands for more than ten years.

By Spencer Williams, who was in Moscow for the Russian-American Chamber of Commerce for a decade, Parker showed that the Soviet practice of political control strictly followed the law outlined by Dr. Gsovski.

F. D. Lehn, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher Co. official, identified letters in which the Soviet book companies in New York claimed connection with Moscow sources.

Edward E. Harper, of the office of the New York secretary of state, testified that the Russian interests established a chain of corporations in his state. Amtorg, said Harper, was followed by Amkniga, then by Bookniga Corporation, then by Bookniga, Inc., then by Four Continent Book Co., which is still in business.

On trial but scarcely mentioned so far in the testimony are three officers of Bookniga Corporation. They are Morris Liskin, 54, president, Norman Weinberg, 25, secretary-treasurer, and Raphael Rush, 40, vice president.

Parker told the court Monday that whenever one of these companies was exposed as a tool of the Soviet it would be succeeded by another, which kept the same offices, employes, telephone number and mission of discrediting "the American way of life."

Thomas P. Cassidy, manager of the business office of the New York Telephone Co., took the witness stand late yesterday. From a huge box of old telephone books, he began to trace this alleged identity of telephone numbers.

Parker said last night that he expects to move into the American phase of the propaganda organization today. Associated with him are Aaron Overman, Charles Fisher, George McJulty, of the Department of Justice, and Assistant District Attorney George E. McNeil.

New Dealers Assail Cut in WPA Funds

New Dealers today will attempt to amend the 1942 relief appropriation bill to provide $1,250,000,000 for the WPA in the coming year, but the House is expected to approve the $886,000,000 outlay recommended by President Roosevelt.

The House Appropriations Committee on Monday reported the relief bill with a reduction of only $95,000 in the sum requested by the President and the House yesterday began a two-day debate on the measure.

Woodrum Defends Bill

New Dealers concentrated their fire yesterday on a provision written into the bill by the relief appropriations subcommittee to earmark $50,000,000 of the $885,905,000 appropriation for removal of surplus commodities under the food stamp plan.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, in charge of the relief measure, defended the diversion of funds to the food stamp system as a form of relief which will benefit WPA workers as well as others now dependent on public assistance.

Opponents of the transfer pointed out that it would cut from 1,000,000 to about 940,000 the average number of persons who can be employed by the WPA during the next 12 months.

Lasser Attacked

Representative Boland (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, majority whip, invited Woodrum to "come to the anthracite coal fields and see the hardships this provision would cause."

Employment of David Lasser, former president of the Workers Alliance, as a special investigator of reemployment of WPA workers in private industry drew sharp criticism from Republican members.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said he will offer an amendment today to bar use of any funds appropriated under the bill for paying Lasser's salary.

Ten Officials of Equity Quit, Protesting Subversive Tactics

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 10.—Two vice presidents of Actors' Equity Association and eight members of the association's council resigned from their positions today in a dramatic protest to combat what they described as "subversive" elements now exerting a dominating influence in Equity affairs.

The resignations were the result of last Friday's Equity election at which three independent candidates, one accused of being a Communist, were elected to the council.

Those who resigned were Florence Reed, second vice president; Peggy Wood, fourth vice president, and the following council members: Winifred Lenihan, Muriel Kirkland, Claudia Morgan, Joseph Vitale, William David, Ben Lackland, Alfred Kappeler and Lee Baker.

They'll Serve Minority

They said Friday's vote was not a vote of confidence for the regular ticket, which they supported, and that they felt they could serve the minority "which agrees with us from the floor rather than the platform."

In a statement addressed to Bert Lytell, president of Equity, the council and the 4,000 members of the union, the ten resigning officials said:

"For years we have been struggling against an influence in our association which seemed to us subversive of American ideals and institutions.

"We have seen this element change Equity more and more from a guild of professionals, working for the best interests of the theater as a whole, to a labor union of different objectives. This union is harassed by partisan politics. It has lost the good will of the public and the Government.

Long, Hard Battle

"It is constantly increasing regulations and restrictions which we cannot believe are for the ultimate good of the actor, the industry or the art of the theater.

"In this long and very hard-fought battle we have believed that we represented the vast majority of our fellow actors. The results of the last election prove conclusively to us that the majority of Equity members are not in agreement with our ideas and ideals. We are out of step with the regiment.

"We who supported the regular ticket and the duly elected nominating committee, in effect, asked for a vote of confidence. We have been repudiated."

Dickstein Asks for Probe To Clear Jews as 'Warmongers'

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

A resolution calling for a special Congressional investigation of charges that Jewish groups are attempting to push the United States into war was introduced in the House yesterday.

Representative Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, citing assertions made on the House floor last week by Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, said the country is entitled to know at once the truth or falsity of the charge that "the people of Jewish faith are warmongers."

Rankin last Wednesday contended that "Wall Street and a little group of our international Jewish brethren are still attempting to harass the President of the United States and the Congress of the United States into plunging us into the European war unprepared."

Representative Edelstein (Democrat), of New York, fell dead outside the House chamber a few minutes after replying to Rankin.

The Dickstein resolution would set up a seven-man committee, with full subpena power, to investigate Rankin's and similar charges.

"If these charges are true," Dickstein said, "something should be done by Congress immediately to eradicate and destroy this evil action by individuals seeking to bring this country int owar, or seeking to interfere with the President or Congress."

If they are not true, he declared, and if "certain groups are using the Jewish minority as a scapegoat," the American people should be given the facts for the protection of their "unity and tolerance."

U. S. Mediator Offers His Aid In Tug Strike

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 10.—A Government mediator offered today to help settle a strike of tugboat captains, mates and engineers that has kept 30 tugs idle in Baltimore harbor for two days.

The offer came from James J. Spillane, a representative of the National Mediation Board, who conferred with counsel for the striking seamen and the five towing companies affected.

Leonard Weinberg, counsel for Local 1510, licensed Marine Officers Association (A. F. L.), said Spillane agreed to sit in on any parley that might be arranged by the union and the Towboats Owners Association.

Weinberg said the union authorized him to submit a proposal to the owners that the men would return to work, provided their demand for a 10 per cent wage increase be negotiated by an "impartial arbitration board."

Present monthly wages paid by the Towboat Owners Association are $220 for captains, $159.50 for mates, $187.50 for chief engineers and $159.50 for assistant engineers.

Weinberg asserted the men were willing to return to work pending negotiations to prevent defense cargoes being tied up.

Although several freighters, tankers and other large vessels managed to dock or leave their berths without the aid of tugs, shipping circles said the full effect of the tug tie-up had not been felt yet.

Dairies, Employes Continue Parleys

Negotiations between spokesmen for 1,200 members of Milk Drivers and Dairy Employes Local 246, A. F. of L., and Washington's 12 largest dairies will continue today with the aid of Labor Department conciliators.

Questions involving wages and hours in a new yearly contract remain to be ironed out, it was said at the close of yesterday's negotiations.

The companies in the dispute include Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Embassy Fairfax, Richfield, Wakefield, Lucerne, Alexandria, Arlington County, Hazel, Model Farms, Holland, Harvey and Thompson's.

U. S. Farmers Now Geared For Defense

By the Associated Press

The Nation received assurance yesterday from R. M. Evans, agricultural adjustment administrator, that American farmers would produce enough food and fiber supplies for use as "a weapon for defense and later in the peace negotiations to use as an instrument for building a decent world."

Evans told the annual National A. A. A. conference here that the Triple-A farm control program was so arranged that it could handle adjustments upward or downward as required for defense, thus making agriculture better prepared for the present emergency than any other industry.

"We can now be proud that farmers through the Triple-A program are making further necessary adjustments quickly and effectively to back up the defense effort," he said in a prepared address.

Evans described the Triple-A program as "the first large scale example of a working economic democracy in the world."

"By economic democracy," he explained, "I mean the right and the means whereby the individual has an opportunity to share in decisions which affect his economic welfare."

"Hitler," he said at another point, "offers Germans in the Third Reich the promise of an improved economic status. We have something much better, much finer. We must revive our old American idea of this country as a land of opportunity for the common man. It is a promise that can be fulfilled if we and our ways are to survive."

Evans said "we might just as well face the fact that there is an economic side to democracy as well as a political and social side."

"Let us recognize that democracy means freedom plus groceries."

1 cup fine bread crumbs
1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon cold water

Make white sauce of butter, flour, salt and milk. Cool, mix lightly with tuna fish, Lea & Perrins Sauce and salt. Spread in shallow pan and set in refrigerator 1 hour. Mold mixture into desired shape, using rounded tablespoon of mixture for each croquette. Roll in crumbs, then in egg to which water is added, and again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat at 390° F. for 3 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper. Makes 5 servings.

Cyprus Attack Begun, Nazi Radio Hints

By the Associated Press

London, June 10.—While the campaign for the Middle East appeared to be going smoothly for the British, Axis radio reports heard in London today indicated that the curtain might be lifting at last for the kind of aerial attack on the Island of Cyprus that cost the Allies Crete.

The German-controlled Jeloey wireless station in occupied Norway broadcast that Cyprus, a British base just 89 miles west of the Syrian coast, had been under running attack for 48 hours.

This account said that Axis airmen had picked out for especially violent attack the port of Famagusta, base for British warships, and Nicosia, the island capital.

While there was no official confirmation here for all this, the report appeared against a background of speculation that some such assault on Cyprus might be expected at any time.

'Phoney' War

Syria So Far Spared Grim Battle Horror

By A. C. Sedgwick

Copyright by New York Times

With the British Forces Somewhere in Syria, June 9 (delayed).—Hopes that this war in Syria may be, mercifully, a phony one and not entail the grimmest aspect of battle have not so far been shattered.

Except at a few places brushes between the invading British and imperial forces and those who have been commanded to withstand them have developed into sharp quick encounteres. On the whole the military situation has been progressing satisfactorily, according to responsible military authorities, with one outstanding exception.

Just north of Matula, near the Biblical site of Dan, Algerian troops with French officers and noncoms throughout the whole of yesterday stuck to their machine guns which were placed at strategic points in the mountains, making things pretty hot for the Australian infantrymen. This was in spite of the Australian shelling of three machine gun positions.

The troops engaged were amply supported by mechanized detachments and there were sufficient Royal Air Force planes to insure overhead security. British yeomanry mounted on horseback took part. They performed valuable service in scouring the rugged mountainsides.

Curious Invasion

This constitutes an invasion of a peculiar sort. For the Allied troops have entered, avowedly, not for conquest. The territory they invade is not enemy. For days there had been speculation over the reception the Allied forces would receive. Some were convinced that the French would fight to the death while others believed they would not fight a all.

Neither conjectures, so far, appear to be correct. There is reason to believe that the British had orders to refrain from violence unless it were absolutely necessary. Actually, it was the French who fired first, it is said.

Forthwith, the fire was answered effectively by the Australian infantry shortly before entering the village of Claire, which lies roughly between Matoula and Merdjayoun. It is not yet revealed what, if any casualties, were sustained during this first encounter.

W. B. Miller Urges Expansion of U. S. Medical Services

Personnel and facilities of the Nation's medical services, both civilian and military, must be expanded for defense purposes, Assistant Federal Security Administrator Watson B. Miller, said yesterday at the first session of a three-day convention of Association of Former Internes of Freedmen's Hospital.

Emergency measures should include the recruiting of physicians from differnet areas on "a quota basis" to augment strength of the "military, industrial, and civilian health and medical services," Mr. Miller stated.

Central planning for medical aspects of civil defense should also include a survey of present hospital facilities, by areas as well as buildings which could be converted for hospital use, the official declared.

Cleave to Germany or Perish, Darlan Pleads

By the Associated Press

Vichy, June 10.—Vice Premier Admiral Darlan tonight warned the nation that France must cleave to Germany or perish.

By emphatic repetition, Darlan indicated he believed eventual German victory was assured and that France must wholeheartedly play the role of "loyal" collaborator in order to merit a favorable peace settlement and a secure place in a Nazi-dominated new Europe.

The vice premier, in a speech broadcast to the nation, made no mention of the British invasion of French-mandated Levant states—although in a preceding address he scathingly attacked France's former allies.

Asks Unstinted Support

Darlan appealed for unreserved support in his collaboration policy, and declared the government had three essential tasks:

"One, to ease the present situation of the French people;

"Two, to prepare for peace insofar as the vanquished can;

"Three, to prepare for France's future in a new Europe."

Of the first, he emphasized that France's immediate aim was to modify the armistice in order to secure increased supplies of food and the return of war prisoners now in German hands.

Nowhere did he indicate there was a possibility of an immediate peace agreement with Germany, and he made it clear that the essential purpose of the present policy of collaboration, from the French point of view, was to gain the best possible bargaining position when Germany decided the time had come to convert the armistice into a final peace treaty.

Fears "Disastrous Peace"

Of France's position in a Nazi new Europe, Darlan asserted that unless the nation recognized the necessity of cooperation, he feared "a disastrous peace for France."

"For France not to carry out the armistice loyally and give the victor reason to denounce it would be equivalent to suicide for herself and her empire," he warned.

"If we don't obtain an honorable peace, if France with numbers of departments amputated, with important territories across the sea lost, enters the new Europe knocked down and bruised she will not rise again and we and our children will live in misery and the hate which war begets."

51,000 French Take Jobs in Germany

Berlin, June 10.—At the end of May 51,000 French workers, including 6,000 women, are reported by the German news agency from Paris to have taken jobs in the Reich.

The same agency declares that there are now 316,000 unemployed in occupied France, 153,000 of whom are men. Only 58 per cent of the total, however, are said to be employable.

Text of Churchill's Speech in Commons Defending Decision to Fight for Crete

No Territorial Designs in Syria Or 'Elsewhere,' Commons Is Told

By the Associated Press

London, June 10.—Following is the text of Prime Minister Churchill's remarks in today's House of Commons debate on conduct of the war:

No one, however ministerially minded, could possibly complain of the tone and temper and the matter of this debate.

The kind of criticism we have had today—some of it very searching—is the kind that the Government not only accept but welcome.

However, the way in which this debate came about was calculated to give one the feeling of a challenge to the security of the administration.

From the point of view of advantage of the country that raises serious considerations. There are all kinds of paragraphs and reports in the newspapers that there is grave uneasiness and unrest.

That being so, one is bound to take a serious view because of the interets confided to our care.

Various Vicissitudes

It would be a mistake for the House to get into the habit of calling for explanations on the various vicissitudes of this dangerous and widespread struggle.

In the first place, no full explanation can possibly be given without revealing valuable information to the enemy, and information not only about particular operation which is over but also about the general position and processes of thought which are followed by our war direction and our high command.

There is always a danger that a minister in my position may be seeking to vindicate a course we have pursued and say something which may supply the enemy with some information about which he is in doubt.

The heads of the dictator governments are not under similar pressure to excuse any ill success that may befall them.

But I am in the service of the Crown and I am always at the disposal of the House of Commons.

The House and the country have placed very considerable responsibilities upon me; I am sure they would not wish me to be at a disadvantage.

I have not heard that Hitler had to attend the Reichstag when he sent the Bismarck on her disastrous cruise when, after waiting a few weeks, she might have gone out accompanied by Tirpitz.

I have not heard any statement of Mussolini's for having lost two-thirds of his empire and having left about 200,000 prisoners in our hands.

It would be better if I were permitted to choose the occasions for making statements on war.

Crete Just a Sector

As to fighting in Crete, it is only one part of an important and complicated campaign being fought in the Middle East.

To select one particular sector of our widely extended front for Parliamentary debate is a partial, lopsided and misleading method of examining the conduct of the war.

The vast scene can only be surveyed as a whole and should not be debated piecemeal

There also comes into the picture distribution of our resources to meet the many calls upon them.

It is asked why it was, when we had Crete in our possession for more than six months, we did not construct numerous air fields and place them in a high state of defense.

Everyone will admit it would have been a mistake to make a great number of air fields unless we could find the AA guns (anti-aircraft guns) and the aircraft.

Unless we had, that would simply have facilitated the descent upon the island.

Why were not enough guns provided to serve air fields in Crete? We had to consider how many guns we had and whether we could afford to spare them for that purpose. All this time, the Battle of the Atlantic has been going on. A very great number of guns which might have usefully been employed in Crete have been and are being being mounted on merchant vessels to beat off German aircraft, whose depredations have been notably lessened thereby.

Judgment Impossible

We had to consider whether our air fields, our air factories and our ports and cities should be further denuded for the sake of the war in the Middle East. Everything we send to the Middle East is out of action for the best part of three months if it has to go round the Cape. No one can judge whether we should have run more risks at home for the sake of fortifying and multiplying Cretan air fields without having full and intimate knowledge of our resources. We provided in Crete a deterrent to enemy attack sufficient to require a major effort on his part, but to attempt to be safe everywhere is to make sure of being strong nowhere.

Without going into facts and figures, which it will not be possible for me to give here, it is impossible for the House or even for newspapers to arrive at a just judgment. A man must be a perfect fool, however, who thinks that we have large quantities of anti-aircraft guns and aircraft lying around unused at the present time.

It was four years ago that I mentioned to the House that the Germans already had 1,500 mobile antiaircraft guns in addition to the whole of their static antiaircraft artillery.

Since then they been making them at a great rate and have conquered more than all they want from countries they have overthrown.

Hore-Belisha made a very cogent and moderate contribution to debate, but used a very difficult tone in a speech which he recently delivered in the country and this makes it necessary to say that the state in which our army was left when he ended his tenure at the war office was lamentable.

We were short of every essential supply and particularly of those special classes of weapons—AA guns, antitank guns and tanks which have proved themselves vital in modern war.

Hore-Belisha (intervening): I do not know why the prime minister should say I left the army in lamentable condition. That is quite out of accord with what he said after the retreat from Dunkerque that we had lost the finest lot of equipment which had ever left these shores.

Until a very short time before the war, the House and the country were opposed to creation of a continental army which, nevertheless, they tried to create.

Another general question is why we have not enjoyed a much stronger and much larger air force in the Middle East.

I can only say this—from the moment when the Battle of Britain was decided in our favor in September and October last year, we have been and are still sending aircraft as fast as possible to the Middle East by every route and every method.

We have not been hampered in this matter as we were in case of AA guns, but the problem has been to send them out.

The Germans have the advantage of permanent air fields in Europe and can send their servicing and personnel and stores by grand continental expresses.

I can give the house assurance that we have done, are doing and will do our utmost to build up the largest possible air force in the Middle East and it is not a question of aircraft but solely transportation in the sense of time it takes to transfer it under conditions of the present war.

It is not aircraft but transportation which is the limiting factor at this end.

This is primarily a matter for commanders in chief in Middle East, although His Majesty's government share to the full their responsibility for whatever is done.

One has to compare this process with sending airplanes packed in crates, put up on ships and sent through great ocean spaces until they reach the Cape, unpacking them and setting them up again.

Comparison Made

One has only to compare these two processes to see Germans can do in days what it takes us weeks or even more and this has its bearings upon the possibility of a German movement back from east to west, which certainly can be executed very swiftly if they resolved upon an assault upon this country.

Cooperation and coordination between services is carried to a very high pitch. The chief air officer lives in the same house in Cairo as the commander in chief. The naval commander in chief has to be at sea very often.

The idea that any one of these problems would be studied by one without close association with the other is quite illusory.

A member intervened: "Who has the final say?"

Prime Minister (resuming):

It is not so much a question of the final say. No disagreement I know of has arisen.

The air force is assisting the army and the fleet in all their functions.

In the event of a difference it could be settled in a few hours by reference to here (apparently the prime minister meant a reference to the cabinet).

These commanders in chief have settled it amongst themselves, although we share to the full responsibility.

It must not be forgotten that, apart from the effort in Greece which was so very costly in aircraft, the situation in Palestine and Iraq as well as Syria has to be considered. The winding up in Ethiopia also makes a very heavy demand upon aircraft and the situation in the Western Desert has also to be considered before any rational judgment could be formed on the disposition of our aircraft and failure to supply an adequate air force over Crete. It would be necessary, as in the case of anti-aircraft guns, to know what were our resources and situation in these other theaters.

Many Factors

It is no use trying to judge these matters without full knowledge and full knowledge cannot be made public outside the narrowest circle compatible with execution of operations. In March we decided to go to the aid of Greece in accordance with our treaty obligations. This exposed us to defeat by overwhelming numbers in Greece unless Yugoslavia played her part or unless the Greek army could be extricated to hold a narrower line if Greece was overrun. It seemed probable Crete would be the next object of attack.

The enemy, with a vast superiority of air power, was able to drive our aircraft from the air fields of Greece and, adding to these his enormously superior antiaircraft batteries, he was able to make these air fields rapidly available for his own use.

Moreover, as the season was advancing, many more air fields became available to him as the weather improved and dried them up.

It was borne in upon us that if an attack on Crete was made it would be primarily an airborne attack for which the vastly superior air force would be available.

The question was whether we should try to defend Crete or yield it without a fight.

No one who bears responsibility for this defense of Crete was ignorant of the fact conditions provided only the most meager air support for troops in the island or for the fleet operating around it.

It was not a fact that dawned upon military and other authorities after this decision had been taken. It was the foundation of the choice.

The choice was whether Crete should be defended without effective air support or whether Germans should be permitted to occupy it without opposition.

Terrible Alternatives

It has been said you should never fight without superior or at least ample air support. It is not a question between what is good and what is bad. The choice is between two very terrible alternatives (cheers), must you yield an important key position one after another?

There are others who have said, and I have seen it in the papers also, that you should defend no place you cannot be sure you can hold. Well, then, can one ever be sure?

If this principle of giving up without a fight any place you cannot be sure of holding were adopted would not the enemy be able to make an unlimited number of valuable conquests without any fighting at all?

And where would you make the stand and engage with resolution? What would happen if you allowed the enemy to overrun without cost to himself the most valuable and strategic points?

Suppose we had never gone to Greece. And suppose we had never defended Crete. Where would the Germans be now?

Suppose we had simply resigned territory and strategic points to them without a fight, might they not at this early stage in the campaign of 1941 already be masters of Syria and Iraq and preparing themselves for an advance into Persia?

Germans in this war have gained many victories very easily. They have overrun countries and beaten down strong powers with very little resistance being offered them.

It is not only the question of time that is gained by fighting—even at a disadvntage—for important points, but there is also the vitally important principle of stubborn resistance to the will of the enemy.

The House will see there are some arguments at least which deserve to be considered before you can adopt the rule that you have got to have a certainty to win at any point and that if you have not got it it is better to clear out beforehand.

Responsibility For Crete

The whole history of the war shows the fatal absurdity of such a doctrine.

Again and again it has been proved that fierce and stubborn resistance, even against heavy odds, even under exceptional difficulties and disadvantages is an essential element in victory.

At any rate, the decision to hold Crete and to fight was taken with full knowledge of the fact air support would be at a minimum.

I take the fullest responsibility for that decision, but chiefs of staff, the defense committee and Gen. Wavell thought not only that Crete ought to be defended but, that, in spite of a lack of air support, we had a good chance of winning the battle. There were no illusions about the scale of the enemy's air-borne attack and it turned out the enemy was prepared to pay an almost unlimited price; and his resources when concentrated on a particular point may often be overwhelming at that point.

Hore-Belisha referred to broadcasts given by Maj. Gen. Collins and Air Commodore Goddard.

I take no responsibility for those statements or for any others which may be made. These officers are not acquainted with the control of affairs. (Members: "Stop them broadcasting.")

I should very much like to stop them and in some cases I have reduced them in number.

It is a very risky thing to ask a professional officer to give a weekly expatiation on war when he cannot know exact facts. (Cries of "everybody thinks they speak for the government.")

I am very glad to see feeling in the house on the subject because on the other hand, we are often appealed to give more information.

It is not possible for the head of the government or for chiefs of staffs to "get" these weekly statements beforehand, but I think the matter must certainly be reconsidered.

I have been asked lots of questions about the actual conduct of the battle in Crete, why were Cretan air fields not mined beforehand or again why weren't they?

I have been asked lots of questions about the actual conduct of the battle in Crete, why were Cretan air fields not mined beforehand or again why they were not commanded by long-range guns and why there were not more tanks allotted to their defense. I could give answers to these questions, but I do not propose to discuss tactics here. His Majesty's government, in their responsibility to Parliament, choose the best generals they can find. They set before them broad strategic operations of the campaign. They offer them the advice or council they can and they support them to the best of their power in men and munitions, and as long as they return the confidence they support them with loyal comradeship in failure or success.

It is impossible to go into tactical details. Defeat is bitter. It is no use trying to explain defeat. People do not like defeat and they do not like explanations, however elaborate or plausible. There is only one answer to defeat. The only answer to defeat is victory. If a government in time of war gives the impression it cannot, in the long run, procure victory, who cares for its explanations? It ought to go—that is to say if you can find another that can do better. However it must be remembered no government can conduct war unless it stands on a solid foundation and is known to stand on that foundation.

The Time Factor

We hoped 25,000 to 30,000 good troops with artillery and a proportion of tanks, aided by Greek forces, would be able to destroy parachute and glider landings of the enemy and prevent him from using air fields or harbors while the navy held off or destroyed the sea attack.

There was a time limit, however, and action of the navy in maintaining the northern sea guard without adequate air defense was bound to be very costly.

We could only stand a certain proportion of naval losses before the seaguard fleet had to be withdrawn.

If, in the meanwhile, the army could succeed in biting off the head of this terrific apparatus of air-borne attack before the time limit was reached, then he would have had to prepare all over again.

He might well have for time at least broken it off.

I wonder what would have been said by our critics if we had given up Crete without firing a shot.

We should have been told we had surrendered to the enemy the command of the Eastern Mediterranean.

Crete was an extremely important salient in our line of defense. It was like Fort Duamont in 1916 and Kamel Hill in 1918.

These were taken by the Germans, but the Germans lost the war. Could you be sure the same results would have been achieved if the Allies had not fought for Duamont and Kamel Hill?

These battles can only be judged in relation to the campaign as a whole.

There is another point of some dimculty which presents itself to me whenever I am asked to make a statement in the House.

Ought I to encourage good hopes of the successful outcome of a particular operation or ought I to prepare public for disappointment?

The latter is the course I have usually followed. British opinion is unique in this respect. We are the only people who like to be told how bad things are.

Different Elsewhere

It is different in other countries. Authorities concerned with Arab problems have urged that we should not indulge in too gloomy hopes as Arabs do not understand the British habit.

It does make me feel that members of Parliament have got to pick their words a little carefully in this deadly world in which we are adrift with dangers which are as measureless as they are unprecedented closing upon us in so many quarters.

It is a great pity if statements are made which add nothing to informative criticism which is so valuable but which can be taken from their context and placarded all over world that we are not united or that our case is worse than it is.

There is one thing I regret very much.

It is that the brunt of this fighting in the Middle East should have fallen so heavily upon splendid Australian and New Zealand troops.

I regret it for the reason, amongst others, that German propaganda is always reproaching us for fighting with other peoples' blood and will say that Britain will fight until the last Australian and New Zealander.

I was glad to see Mr. Menzies, in his noble speech, dealt with this foul propaganda as it deserves.

There have been during 1941 almost as many British as there are Australian and New Zealand troops engaged in the Western Desert, Greece and Crete.

Losses this year are slightly heavier for British than Dominion troops, and in Crete numbers were almost equal, though the British were slightly heavier. That includes killed, wounded and missing and excludes Indian and other troops.

I have asked the Secretary of State for War to have mentioned more frequently when possible the names of British regiments.

Among those that fought in Crete were the Black Watch, the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, Lancashire Regiment, Welch Regiment, York and Lancaster Regiment, Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers and number of Royal Marines.

Royal Marines formed the rearguard and suffered most. Of 2,000 Marines 1,400 became casualties or prisoners.

Naval Losses Heavy

The naval loss of life in those operations exceeded 500 officers and men and we also lost 1,300 men in the Hood.

Out of 90,000 lost so far in this war at home and abroad, at least 85,000 came from the mother country. I repudiate German propaganda both on behalf of the mother country and Australia and New Zealand.

I might well be asked why, having begun the Battle of Crete, did we not persist in the defense? If you could bring off 17,000 safely to return to Egypt, why not reinforce with 17,000 and carry on the battle? I have tried to explain in a simple way that the moment it was proved we could not crush air-borne landings before fleet losses became too heavy to keep off sea-borne landings, Crete was lost. It was one thing to take off 17,000 men with sidearms and another to land 17,000 with guns and vehicles. I think it was a remarkable thing that so many got away.

The Battle of Crete attained a severity and fierceness which Germans have not previously encountered in their walk through Europe. In killed, wounded, prisoners and missing we have lost about 15,000 men. This takes no account of the loss of Greeks and Cretans who fought with the utmost bravery. From the most precise inquiries we believe about 5,000 Germans were drowned in trying to cross the sea and at least 12,000 were killed or wounded on the island. In addition, the air force the Germans employed sustained extraordinary losses—above 180 fighter and bomber aircraft and at least 150 troop-carrying airplanes and this, at a time when our air strength is overtaking the enemy, is important.

I am sure it will be found that this somber, ferocious battle which was lost—and lost I think by no important margin—was a battle well worth fighting and it will play an extremely important part in the whole defense of the Nile Valley throughout the whole year.

I do not think there are any responsible for it who would not take the same decision again although, like our critics, we would be wiser after the event.

As to lessons to be learned, reports from officers who took part in the thickest of the fighting will be examined by the general staff and will also be placed before Sir Alan Brooke, who commands several million men in this island and Great Britain, including the home guard.

Tips for Home Front

There are two things to bear in mind in comparing what happened in Crete with what might happen here.

Firstly we rely on a strong superiority in air power and on much greater air power both actually and relatively than was proved sufficient last autumn.

Secondly, the scale of effort required of the Germans would have to be many times greater than was necessary in Crete and this might be beyond their resources.

However, everything will be done to meet an air-borne or sea-borne attack launched on a vast scale and maintained with a total disregard of losses.

An attack by parachute troops and gliders may be likened to an attack by incendiary bombs, which if not extinguished quickly one by one may lead to an enormous conflagration.

We are making many improvements in the defense of our air fields and in the mobility of forces employed on that and other tasks. Nothing will be stinted and not a moment will be lost.

It is not true that Germans clothed their parachute troops who attacked Crete in New Zealand uniforms.

I gave this report to the House as it reached me from the commander, in chief for the Middle East, but he now informs me a mistake arose from fact that parachute troops, after landing at one point, drove a number of New Zealand walking wounded with them and before them in their attack and therefore the cry arose that they were in New Zealand uniform.

There is no objection to the use of parachute troops in war so long as they are properly dressed in the uniform of their country and that uniform is distinctive.

Hore-Belisha has associated himself with a movement for much greater development of the air force actively associated with the army.

Last year when we were considering our forces, the great need was to multiply fighters and bombers. It became an enormously important matter.

Army cooperation squadrons were associated with military corps, but not on the scale which was desirable or to the extent which was desirable.

I think it is of the utmost consequence that every division, especially every armored division, should have a chance to train in close relationship with the particular number of aircraft that it knows and that it can call on at will—and under its own command for purposes of tactical operations.

But it was not possible last year to provide it on a large scale without entrenching on other domains which were even more vital to our safety.

It is our intention to go forward upon that object immediately and to provide the army with considerable numbers of airplanes suited entirely to the work they have to do and, above all, to develop all that wireless connection between ground forces and air and military which Germans have carried out to such an extraordinary point of perfection.

If this had been done in Crete it would not have made any difference, because the numbers there for the purpose of cooperating with divisions could not have altered the event.

Hore-Belisha asked how it was decided that the air force should be withdrawn.

It was decided by the commander in chief for the air force in the Middle East on recommendation of Gen. Freyberg and was concurred in by Group Capt. Beamish, commander of the fleet air arm on the spot.

If that had not been done they would have been blown off airdromes without being able to affect in the slightest degree the course of events.

Now I come to the Syrian operation.

Let me first of all repeat that we have no territorial designs in Syria or anywhere else in French territory. We seek no colonies nor advantages of any kind for ourselves in this war.

Let none of our French friends be deceived by latent German and Vichy propaganda. On the contrary, we shall do all in our power to restore the freedom, independence and rights of France.

I have, in a letter I wrote Gen. de Gaulle, said "the rights and greatness of France." We will do all in our power to restore her freedom, but it will be for the French to aid in the restoration.

There cannot be any doubt that Gen. de Gaulle is a more zealous defender of France's interests than the men of Vichy, whose policy is one of utter subservience to the Germans.

Strategic Significance

It did not take much intelligence to see that infiltration into Syria by Germans and their intrigues in Iraq constituted a very great danger to the whole eastern flank of our defenses in the Nile Valley and Suez Canal. The only choice before us in that theater for some time has been whether to encourage the Free French to attempt a counterpenetration by themselves or whether, at heavy risk, to prepare a considerable force—as we have done. It was also necessary to restore our position in Iraq before any serious advance in Syria could be made. Our relations with Vichy and possibilities of an open breach with the Vichy government eventually raised the military and strategic significance of these movements to the very highest point.

Above all, the formidable menace of invasion of Egypt by the German army of Cirenaica, supported by large Italian forces with German stiffening, remains our chief preoccupation in the Middle East. An advance by German armored forces into Egypt has been threatened for the last two months and there would not be much use in attempting to cope with the situation in Syria if, at the same time, our defenses in the Western Desert were beaten down and broken, though we have to take all these things into consideration and I was very glad when Gen. Wavell reported he was in a position to make the advance which began on Sunday morning and which, so far as I have been informed up to present, is progressing with very little opposition and favorably.

This position in Syria was very nearly gone. German poison was spreading through the country. A revolt in Iraq, perhaps beginning prematurely, enabled us to take necessary measures and correct the evil, but again we must not rejoice or give way to jubilation while we are engaged in operations of this difficult character and when the reaction of the Germans still remains obscure and unknown. It is very easy for critics, without troubling too much about our resources and often without sense of time and distance, to clamor for action, now here and now there. One can see how many attractive strategic propositions there are even on a most cursory examination of an atlas.

Others have said we must not follow a hand-to-mouth strategy, we must regain initiative and impart to all our operations the sense of mastery and design which the Germans so often display.

No one agrees with all that more than I, but it is a good deal easier said than done—especially while the enemy possesses vastly superior resources and many important strategic advantages.

For these reasons I have never encouraged any hopes of a short or easy war.

Nonetheless, it would be a mistake to go to the other extreme and to belittle the remarkable achievements of our country and its armed forces.

Rise in Gun Production

There are many things for which we can be thankful. The air attack on this island has not developed. It has not overwhelmed us. Indeed, we have risen through and from it strengthened and glorified.

There is no truth in the statement that productivity in our factories is falling at an alarming rate. It may not be going as fast as we should like, but if anyone can do anything to make it go faster he will be rendering a great service.

In guns and heavy tanks, the monthly average for the first quarter of 1941 was 50 per cent greater than in the first quarter of 1940.

The output for the month of May, a four-week month, was the highest yet reached and more than double the monthly rate for last quarter in 1940.

I took care to contradict Hore-Belisha's statement this afternoon because it happened to emerge from two foreign countries in the course of the morning. What a very serious effect this statement produced on opinion there, how it was published rapidly throughout Spain for instance, given greatest prominence—coming as it did from a former secretary of state—it was said to be exercising a bad effect.

We have many things we may be thankful for. Our production is very far from being beaten down by the disorganization of the air attack. It is increasing at a very high rate.

The Battle of the Atlantic is also being well maintained. In January, Hitler mentioned March as the peak month of his effort against us on the seas.

We were to be exposed to attacks on a scale never dreamed of and there were rumors of hundreds of U-boats and masses of aircraft that were to be used against us. These rumors were spread about the world and very alarming impressions wer produced.

March has come and gone;

April and May have gone and we now near the middle of June.

Apart from the losses incurred in the fight in the Mediterranean, which are serious, the month of May was in fact the best month we have had for some time upon the Atlantic.

Prodigious exertions have been made to bring in the cargoes and protect the ships and these exertions have not failed.

It is very much easier to sink ships than to build them or bring them safely across the ocean. We have lately been taking a stronger hand in this sinking process ourselves and it is a most astonishing fact that in the month of May we sank, captured and scuttled no less than 257,000 tons of enemy shipping, although they presented a target only one-tenth of what we present to them.

While they slink along from port to port, we maintain our whole worldwide traffic with never less than 1,000 ships on the sea or less than 400 in the danger zone on any day.

Optimistic in Near East

Yet losses we inflicted in the month of May were in the nature of three-fourths of the losses they inflicted on us.

This also has a bearing on the possibility of a sea-borne invasion because destruction of the enemy tonnage is proceeding at a most rapid and satisfactory rate.

Nor need solid grounds for confidence and thankfulness fall from us when we look at the aspect of the war in the Middle East. We have been at war for 21 months.

Almost a year has passed since France deserted us and Italy came in against us.

If anybody had said in June last year that we should today hold every yard of the territories for which Great Britain is responsible in the Middle East, that we should have conquered the whole Italian Empire, that Egypt, Palestine and Iraq would have been successfully defended—anyone who said that would have been thought a foolish visionary. Yet that is the position at the moment.

It is more than three months ago since the Germans wave out that they would be in Suez in a month and were telling Spaniards when Suez fell they would have to come into the war.

Two months ago we were told we would be driven out of Tobruk or forced to capitulate and we were also warned of a German thrust at Assiut, at the head of the Delta.

Six weeks ago, Iraq was ablaze. Habbaniyah was declared to be in direct jeopardy. An insurgent government ruled in Bagdad in closest association with Germans and Italians. Our forces were pinned at Basra while Kirkuk and Mosul were in enemy hands.

All Regained

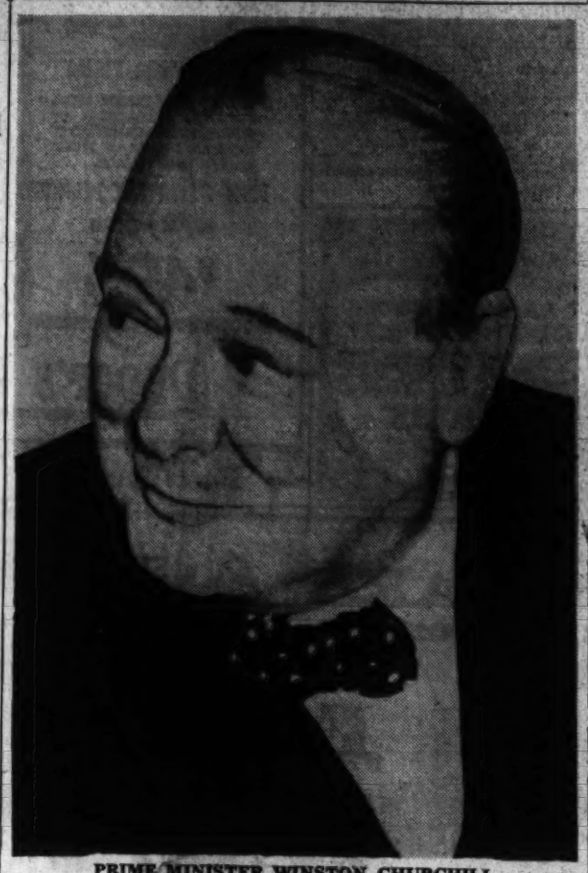
All has now been regained and we are advancing in Syria in force.

Our front at Meras Matruh, in the Western Desert, is unbroken and our defensive lines there are stronger than ever.

The large forces occupied in conquest of Ethiopia are now set free and many of them are on their way to or have already reached the Delta of the Nile.

It would be most unfair and wrong, in the middle of operations which so far have been crowned with remarkable success, to select the loss of Crete as a pretext for branding with failure or taint the great campaign for defense of the Middle East which has so far prospered beyond all expectation and is now entering upon an even more intense and critical stage.

I give no guarantee, I make no promise or prediction for the future, but if the next six months during which we must expect ever harder fighting and many disappointments, should find us in no worse position than that in which we stand today and if, after having fought so long alone against Germany and Italy and all the intrigues and treacheries of Vichy, we should still be found in six months time to be faithful and unbeaten guardians of the Nile Valley and of regions which lie about it—then I say that a famous chapter will have been written in the martial history of Britain and the British Commonwealth of Nations.



PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL

Battle Declared 'Worth Fighting' Though Victory Was Doubtful

War Causing Few Hardships To Average Worker in Italy

By Eleanor Packard

United Press Staff Writer

Rome, June 10.—The first anniversary of Italy's entry into the war today found Premier Benito Mussolini's self-sufficiency program operating so that the civilian population seemed to be subjected to less discomfort than the people of any other belligerent.

Unlike Britain and Germany, Italy has not introduced rationing of clothing. Such curtailment in the use of raw materials as the country has felt necessary has been effected at the source.

In the food line, most unbiased observers believe Italy is the country which is least likely to suffer from a prolonged war. Only two meat days a week is not the hardship here that it would be in other countries where the people are accustomed to eating plenty of meat and where the climate is more rigorous. Millions of working-class Italians never ate meat more than once or twice a week.

Substitutes Plentiful

The rationing of spaghetti, rice and cornmeal is the greatest hardship the average Italian has been called on to face. Inexpensive substitutes for those hearty dishes, such as beans and lentils, dried peas and lima beans, are not rationed and appear to be plentiful.

Rationing of fats, particularly olive oil, necessitated considerable changes in cooking methods. The Italians always have been partial to fried foods. But the ration is sufficient to good health.

In the realm of vegetables, salads and fruits Italy has far more than she needs. She always has been a big exporter of such products, one of her chief prewar customers being Great Britain. Now most of the surplus is going to Germany. If the very worst should happen the Italians always could live on their vegetables and fruits.

Though a great majority of wages were frozen when Italy entered the war, many in the lower classes have better jobs than they could possibly hope for in peacetime. Hence there is more prosperity in that class.

Certain unemployment is more or less chronic in peacetime Italy. The only hope of the unskilled working class woman was to get a job as a domestic servant at skimpy pay. Now servants are hard to get, since the girls prefer to work in factories where they get better pay and have their evenings free.

Italy is poor in raw materials and therefore obliged to import great quantities to feed her war machine. Most of her transport, rail and water, must be devoted to bringing in the essential raw materials. That means a drastic reduction in imports for civilian consumption and at the same time an intense industrial effort to produce goods to pay for imports.

The Axis partners agreed not to present each other any bills for goods supplied until the war is over. Italy probably is the gainer. The bulk of her steel and coal for armaments comes from Germany.

Italy is sending large shipments of food, clothing and textiles to Germany. The country's entire industrial plant cannot be devoted to the production of armaments, since the requirements of her own and other civilian populations must be supplied.

Industries Guarded

Also, Italy has a weather eye on postwar economic problems and does not want to sacrifice her well developed textile and clothing industry even temporarily.

Textile manufacturers are not permitted to use more than 20 per cent of pure wool, cotton or silk in the production of their goods. Regulations have been issued for the use of leather in shoes and stipulating that certain parts must be made with substitutes.

An infinite variety of substitutes used in the manufacture of clothing material prevent the limitations on the use of cotton, silk and wool from becoming a hardship. Most of the goods thus produced are attractive to look at and wear fairly well.

Ft. Meade Troops Get Special Riot Training

Dispersion of Mobs Taught in Secluded Areas of Reservation

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Combat regiments of the Twenty-ninth Division at Fort George G. Meade, Md., have begun intensive training in riot duty, street fighting and handling mobs, The Post learned yesterday.

While this addition to the division's training program coincides with Army possession of the North American Aviation plant at Inglewood, Calif., it was understood it was ordered by higher authority more than a week ago. It also was learned that since mid-May the division has been training officers of some infantry battalions in the command of troops in domestic disorders.

Training now in progress, however, includes actual use of troops in hypothetical riots, with rifles, bayonets, machine guns, gas and all infantry weapons. In addition to the division's four infantry regiments, its three field artillery regiments and its engineer regiment are being instructed in this duty, formerly restricted almost entirely to the State-controlled National Guard.

In secluded parts of the Fort Meade reservation, fenced off and guarded as part of the combat range, battalions are given problems involving strikes or other situations conducive to disorder. Among abandoned farm buildings representing structures in towns, they are taught principles of attack and dispersion of crowds and mobs, with the distinction that a mob is an unruly crowd.

Training includes attack on buildings, marching through city streets, defense of strategic points, such as bridges, powerhouses and reservoirs. They are taught mopping up in city streets and buildings, dealing with snipers and methods of isolating and taking leaders and incitors of riots and disorders.

Among their principle weapons are chemicals, gas and smoke, spread by hand grenades, pots and rifle grenades.

Since induction of the National Guard, traditionally responsible for suppression of domestic disorders, into Federal service, all troops now are Federally controlled and all, it is understood, are being trained in this duty. Authority for such use of Federal troops is found in Article IV, Section 4, and Article II, Sections 1, 2 and 3, of the Constitution. The former provides that the United States shall protect "each State against domestic violence," the latter that the President, as commander in chief of the Army and Navy and of the militia when in Federal service, is obliged to protect the Constitution of the United States.

Special training in riot duty is being superimposed on the standard program already established for bringing the division to top efficiency as a combat unit.

Woman Marks 100th Birthday Friday the 13th

MRS. ROBERT A. HATCHER,
100 Years Old Friday 13th

Mrs. Robert A. Hatcher, who will laugh at superstition by celebrating her 100th birthday Friday the Thirteenth, had a little practice for the great day yesterday.

She cut a birthday cake as the guest of women of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, New Mexico and Nebraska Avenues Northwest, at a luncheon held yesterday at the church. She has been a member there for 72 years.

Her century of life will be celebrated at the Methodist Home where she has resided for nearly 14 years. Mrs. Hatcher said yesterday she plans to wear a dress 125 years old at the celebration. It was worn by her mother at her wedding.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes being wheeled about in his baby carriage in Glens Falls, N. Y., and an uncle who was a soldier in the American Revolution are among the memories Mrs. Hatcher treasures.

She reads the Bible and the newspapers a great deal, has many friends, and until recently walked more than a mile daily.

All the arrangements for her birthday party have been planned by Mrs. Hatcher.

British in Syria Laxly Resisted

lied troops in the advance on Beirut.

[Some of these units were reported to have grabbed the bridge over the Litani River, 40 miles south of Beirut, when pro-Vichy French troops tried to destroy it. They held it and facilitated the crossing of the British and Free French land troops.]

An R. A. F. communique today revealed five enemy bombers had been shot down during British air patrols over warships of the royal navy near the Syrian coast.

Although it was ficially stated on Vichy that British troops had been landed from warship on the Lebanon coast between Tyre and Beirut, the admiralty refused tonight to confirm that Britain's Mediterranean fleet had taken any action as yet other than patrolling the Syrian coast. Foreign reports that Tripoli had been bombed by the royal navy were denied categorically.

Air reinforcements which have arrived in Syria were stated in Vichy to have given the French almost equal strength with the British forces there. The planes were said to have been flown from Tunisia.

Although Berlin declared today that Berlin was not giving military aid to the French in Syria, the R. A. F. communique disclosed that the Nazis were still in control of the airport at Aleppo which had been attacked successfully by British bombers.

Emphasizing that the R. A. F. and the Australian fliers had supported the Allied advance, the communique added fighter planes had attacked and driven off a number of enemy aircraft which had attempted to bomb Allied motor transport at Sanamien.

During a long attack by enemy raiders on Haifa" bombs were dropped which damaged civilian property slightly, despite a heavy barrage sent aloft by the ground defenses, the communique said. One hostile aircraft was destroyed by the antiaircraft fire.

Before the last German raider had returned from the Haifa attack to Aleppo, British planes were over the airport bombing airplanes on the ground and the flare path along which the raiders were landing. Fires were started by the British bombs and much damage was caused, the communique said.

British Reach Turkish Border

Ankara, June 10.—British motorized forces, cutting through the northeastern corner of Syria from Iraq, have captured the village of Qamishli and reached the Turkish frontier just south of the important Turkish railway junction of Nisibin.

This operation was completed last night and it is now believed the British are moving eastward along the border, with the eventual objective of Aleppo.

Virginia Group In House Urged To Vote D. C. Tax

The Virginia State Corporation Commission yesterday asked all nine members of the State's delegation in the House to vote for a 2-cent increase in the District gasoline tax.

In a letter signed by Thomas W. Cullin, commission chairman, and by Commissioners William Meade Fletcher H. Lester Hooker, the members of Congress were told that a higher District gas tax would add thousands of dollars annually to Virginia revenues.

Buy Winter Coal Now, U. S. Urges

Cooler Homes Suggested

"All of us can give up some pleasure driving," he added. "We will be glad to make such a small sacrifice. I also suggest that all of us see that his oil burner is in good condition. It will be healthier, too, and more economical if we keep our homes a little cooler next winter."

The appeal to "buy coal now" was issued by the Consumers Counsel, with indorsement of the Offices of Production Management, Transportation Coordination, Price Administration and the Consumer Adviser.

Paul Sifton, acting director of the Consumers Counsel, a Government agency established to protect bituminous coal users, said that "it is extremely important to get this coal moved this summer. If consumers do not buy now they may be in trouble later."

"Purchasing and storing of substantial tonnages during the summer will lighten the peak that movement of crops and national defense production will throw upon the transport system beginning next September," the counsel said.

Warns Against Panicky Buying

"Summer buying and storage of coal are advocated as a direct and substantial aid to national defense, provided the prices at which the coal is being offered are not out of line with last winter's prices less the usual summer discounts."

The counsel warned against "panicky buying at high prices," saying that reports had been received of price jumps up to 35 and 40 cents a ton in some Eastern fields.

In a statement accompanying the appeal, Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, said:

"The chief headache in the bituminous coal situation—and it is a serious one—is to see to it that this bulk commodity, which is more than 30 per cent of the total rail traffic of the Nation, is moved from the mines to the consumers with a minimum interference with the movement of other commodities that must be moved if National defense is to be accelerated without interruption.

"Every coal consumer who has the storage space and the money can do his bit for the Nation by ordering and taking delivery during the summer months. Orders should be placed now and delivery taken as soon as producers, distributors and retailers can move the coal."

Summer Prices Available

Threatened shortages were reported most likely in the East and some portions of the Middle West, and many localities where coal is not moved by truck.

The appeal to coal consumers will be emphasized, the council announced, by press, radio, posters and the cooperation of local defense councils, coal distributors and retailers in a concerted drive to move the maximum amount of coal before winter.

If the campaign goes over, Sifton said, "a coal shortage may be avoided."

The announcement emphasized that coal may be bought now in many regions at "summer prices" and Sifton said the counsel had petitioned the Bituminous Coal Administration to modify minimum prices for all districts allowing summer discounts.

1,000 Planes Sent Britain, Says Curtiss

By Edwin Stout
Associated Press Staff Writer

Buffalo, N. Y., June 10.—The Curtiss-Wright Co. announced today it had sent more than 1,000 fast Tomahawk fighters to Britain and demonstrated a faster, spike-nosed pursuit plane whose performance and armament were kept secret.

Officials of the company said they did not know how many Tomahawks had reached England or the Near East and had not yet received detailed reports of their performance in battle.

The Bell Aircraft Corporation, which makes the P-39 Airacobra, said it had sent 11 of these cannon-carrying fighters to England but that none had yet seen action. Curtiss expects production capacity of 60 pursuit planes a day by spring, and Bell, six a day.

The new Curtiss 4-46, more pointed and streamlined than the P-40 Tomahawk, was flown before returned war correspondents who went through the Curtiss and Bell plants. Although company employes said they could not talk about its performance, they declared it was "much better" than the Tomahawk and would be safely in the 400-mile-an-hour class.

The new Curtiss is powered by an Allison engine, believed to be the new 1,325 horsepower motor with improved supercharger. Burdette Wright, vice president of Curtiss-Wright, said he believed the P-46 would equal any foreign fighter.

Both Wright and Lawrence D. Bell, president and general manager of Bell Aircraft, said motor deliveries from Allison were now keeping up with plane production. Neither Bell nor Wright indicated how much of their production went to England, but correspondents noted that most of the planes being finished in the two plants either bore the R. A. F. insignia or had special British fittings.

At the end of the Bell production line were four Airacobras, three fitted with mountings for 20-millimeter guns which British are ordering and the fourth, with the American 37-millimeter cannon.

Wyoming Crash Kills 6 Fliers; Army Bomber Lost in Panama

Wreckage of B-18 Discovered on Mesa By Ground Crews

By International News Service

Lyman, Wyo., June 10.—Six Army airmen were killed in the crash of a B-18 bomber in the broken country of southwest Wyoming, it was reported by ground crews who reached the wreckage late today.

The dead were Capt. D. N. Motherwell, pilot, commandant of the Twelfth Reconnaissance Group, Boise, Idaho; Lieut. L. K. Harvey, Lakewood, Ohio; Lieut. T. F. Holsteen, Burlington, Iowa; Lieut. J. V. Gallagher, Bayonne, N. J.; Staff Sergt. T. J. McGuran, Kenosha, Wis., and Staff Sergt. D. E. Hawley, of Yakima, Wash.

The wreckage was found on a mesa about 15 miles east of the Fort Bridger emergency landing field, a short distance southeast of Lyman.

The bodies were removed from the smashed ship and were being brought to Lyman by ambulance, over roads deep in mud.

Search crews who first reached the wreckage reported the craft had smashed into the slope of the mesa and plowed uphill a short distance before stopping.

Mrs. D. N. Motherwell, wife of the pilot, was visiting friends, Capt. and Mrs. Hunter Harris, jr., at Bolling Field, when news of her husband's death was received. She plans to remain here for the funeral at Arlington Cemetery, then return to her home in Texas.

Seven Aboard Plane Missing in Search Of Scouting Craft

By the Associated Press

Panama, June 10.—A United States Army bomber with seven persons aboard has been missing since yesterday afternoon, Army officials announced today.

The bomber apparently was lost while searching for another plane, an observation craft with three occupants, which has not been heard from since Sunday evening.

Officials said the bomber was lost in the vicinity of the Army training base at Rio Hata. The observation plane was on a night flight from France Field to Rio Hata.

One report said a man was seen in the jungles waving to searching planes circling overhead and a ground party has been sent out to investigate.

Committee for Same Income Tax Base

excess profits tax recommendations.

Last Saturday, the committee had agreed not to reduce individual exemptions for purposes of the surtax. Yesterday it decided to keep the present base for imposition of the normal income tax rates, as well as the surtax.

The committe remained undetermined on how steeply to scale the surtaxes, particularly in the lower income tax brackets, but may reach a decision today. Observers thought it unlikely it would start the surtaxes as high as 11 per cent on the first dollar of taxable income, as the Treasury proposes. A compromise was expected between surtax rates proposed by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, and the heavy impact on the lower brackets proposed by the Treasury.

In upholding the existing levels of income tax exemption, Ways and Means committeemen voted to continue as well the present $400 credit for dependents, except in the case of "heads of families" who are not husbands or wives.

Under this decision, a widow or a widower who has only one child could not claim the $400 credit in addition to their $2,000 exemption, but could allow the credit on the second or succeeding children. The committee voted to disallow "the $400 exemption for the first dependent who makes it possible for the head of the family to qualify as such."

The latter decision had substantial opposition, and a move to reconsider it may later be made.

Roosevelt Asks $100,075,000 For Navy Ships

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt asked Congress for $100,075,000 yesterday to buy 26 additional auxiliary ships for the Navy and to accelerate the output of shipbuilders.

A message from the Bureau of the Budget which accompanied the President's request to Speaker Rayburn said 19 of the ships would be bought from the Maritime Commission and 7 from the Army at a total cost of $100,000,000.

The message said that $75,000 was needed to cover expenses incurred under the Navy speed-up program for increasing the output of workmen at navy yards and plants engaged in naval works.

At the same time the Maritime Commission directed the Southern Pacific Co. to deliver its entire fleet of ten cargo vessels "for national defense purposes."

The vessels, the commission said, are being acquired pursuant to President Roosevelt's order calling for a 2,000,000-ton shipping pool to be used to aid nations whose defense he deems vital to the United States.

The cargo vessels owned by the Southern Pacific company formerly were operated as the Morgan Line in coastwise service from New York and Baltimore to Galveston and Houston. The deadweight tonnage of each:

El Almirante, 7,325; El Capitan, 7,325; El Coston, 7,740; El Estero, 5,270; El Isleo, 5,250; El Lago, 5,250; El Mundo, 6,850; El Occidente, 6,850; El Oceano, 7,900, and El Oriente, 6,850.

At New York, the Southern Pacific Steamship Lines said that its subsidiary, the Morgan Line, had been forced to discontinue its shipping business because of the commission's acquisition of its 10 ships.

Commission the ship carried steel and other supplies, but no war materials or arms connected with the lend-lease program.

Aboard were 46 persons, eight of them passengers. Four of the eight passengers were Americans—R. W. McCullough and his 2-year-old son, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cohn. Mrs. McCullough, also aboard, was said to have been a Dutch citizen who had not yet become an American.

McCullough, 32-year-old chemical engineer employed by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., was bound for Elizabethtown, South Africa. Cohn was en route to manage a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer theater at Durban, South Africa.

The other three passengers were British, one of whom—Philip C. Eccles—was among the survivors picked up by the Ozorio. Eccles, an accountant, was bound for Alexandria, Egypt, for his employer, Barclay's Bank, a private English banking house.

Fragmentary reports told a story of sudden disaster at sea followed by a grim experience for the survivors of drifting 18 days in a lifeboat before they were found by the Ozorio about 800 miles from the spot in the vast South Atlantic, where the Robin Moor sank May 21.

The vessel sank at longitude 6.15 north, latitude 25.30 west, a position some 700 miles south of the Cape Verde islands and a similar distance from Dakar.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early commented:

"The position of the ship apparently put it well within American waters. We are trying to determine officially what happened."

A spokesman for the Robin Moor owners at New York said the freighter was plainly marked as an American ship.

He said that after sundown a large searchlight was played continuously on the American flag flying from the stern.

First Sinking Report

Capt. Pereira's first message to the press associations follows:

"On June 8, at 9 o'clock in the evening in latitude 0.46 north and longitude 37.37 west, I rescued 11 survivors in one life boat of the North American ship Robin Moor, which was torpedoed May 21 at the position latitude 6:15 north, longitude 25:30 west.

"Their names are John J. Danigan, Karl Nilson, Virgil Sanderlin, William S. Carey, Peter Buss, Donald Schabelse, H. O. Rice, R. Carlise, Antonio Santos, Hugh Murphy and P. C. Eccles.

"The saved members of the crew declared that there were thre more lifeboats, with 28 members of the crew and 7 passengers, including 3 women and 1 child.

"The commander of the Brazilian ship Tamandare, which I also requested to investigate, said that about 1 p. m. yesterday he found pieces of baggage consisting of one suitcase and children's toys.

"Unfortunately nothing more has been found up to now.

"Among the 11 rescued are three officers.

"We are continuing to Recife (Pernambuco) Brazil, where we expect to arrive tomorrow night."

Antistrike Sentiment Found Rising

den, as compared with 72 per cent taking this stand not quite a year ago. The actual votes:

	Forbid Strikes	Don't Forbid	Undec.
1940 Survey	72%	20%	8%
Today's Survey	76	19	5

Interviewing for the present survey was begun in the last week of May and completed early this month.

Institute studies have repeatedly shown that the majority of Americans are not "anti-labor," and that they believe in labor's right to bargain collectively. Yet they do not want United States defense efforts halted by strikes.

For many months the public has favored a national mediation system, which they have hoped would iron out difficulties without loss of working time. Eighty-five per cent of the voters went on record for such a system last March, just before President Roosevelt named the present 11-man board.

But the current study indicates how far a majority might be willing to go, if milder course do not bring results.

Voter comments show two ideas uppermost in the minds of those who favor a strike ban in defense industries: (1) the belief that American defense has been too slow, that every moment counts and that "production is vital" to our national safety and (2) the feeling that if the government can draft men to serve in the Army for $21 a month, it should be able to demand "some sacrifices" of their brothers in the defense factories.

Many voters offered the comment that "strikes hurt everybody but Hitler."

Some of the most vehement opinions, of course, are held by those on the other side of the question, who believe that the strike is a fundamental right, "emergency or no emergency."

A Massachusetts metal worker told the interviewer the strike is "the only weapon" labor has and that "nothing is going to keep guys like me from striking when somebody takes advantage of us."

Others thought it was unfair to forbid strikes, especially for higher wages, when, it was thought, many businesses were likely to make large profits from defense orders.

'Just Enough' Oil Can Hold Japan

control if she took Singapore.

No American who drives a car, talks on a telephone, plays golf, takes ice cubes from a refrigerator, or rides in a plane, or a train, or a bus can continue to do these things for long if our supply of rubber is cut off.

Other basic reasons for opposing a southern move by Japan are that by going South Japan would gain control of necessities the United States needs to carry on industry and defend herself in war. Almost all the quinine in the world comes from Java in the Dutch East Indies. Quinine, in the area where United States military and naval forces will have to operate to defend the Western Hemisphere from Nazi aggression in the event of a Nazi victory over England, is as important as ammunition.

Tin, tungsten for machine tools, antimony for babbitt metal, tung oil with its myriad uses, manila hemp for rope for the navy and merchant marine, chromium and manganese, necessities for rearmament, all of these are strategic materials necessary to a United States at war, which Japan would control if she moved south successfully.

If the United States fights Japan it will be to keep her from depriving us of those necessities. But the principal reason it would be necessary to oppose her would be to keep our supply of rubber. Deprived of rubber the United States could never build or maintain the mechanized army that is the first necessity to construct for national defense.

Where Hitler Comes In

Military strategy is inseparable from economic strategy and since it is to Germany's interest that America and England both be deprived of the necessities they get from the South China Sea area, Germany has steadily urged and pushed Japan toward that area. Germany also wishes to divert every possible American and British naval unit from the Atlantic to the Pacific to oppose Japan while Germany makes her effort against England. Germany wishes to keep the bulk of the United States fleet in the Pacific and to contain as many Empire divisions, ships and planes, in the Pacific area as she can. The Japanese threat against Singapore, periodically emphasized, accomplishes this.

But Japan has to move south, whether Germany wants her to or not, for another reason. Japan has not enough iron to manufacture armament and munitions. She has not enough oil to refine gasoline for her planes or to fuel her battleships. At this moment Japan is dependent on the United States, Great Britain and the Dutch East Indies for the gasoline and oil that is vital for her to make war, and a great part of her iron ore comes from the Phillipines.

Japan has built up a reserve supply of gasoline and oil to last her air-force and navy for one year of war. If the United States and Great Britain shut off her gasoline and oil she would be forced to move south toward oil at once or else begin exhausting her war reserve.

Naturally, she would not move the day the gasoline and oil supply was cut off. It takes time to organize such a move. But she would have to start getting that movement under way and consuming her reserve the minute her gasoline and oil supply was cut off.

The United States and Great Britain, therefore, have a great strategical advantage over Japan. They can force her to move toward oil whenever they want. They can also, by continuing to supply Japan with gasoline and oil in progressively decreasing amounts due to their own necessities for conserving this fuel for national defense requirements, force a decrease in the Japanese reserve of war fuel without precipitating action on Japan's part.

'I Rode in a Secret Dive Bomber'

Writer Tells of Plane Called 'Sweetest I Ever Saw' by Navy Aide

By Dan Rogers
United Press Staff Writer

Buffalo, June 10.—This afternoon I rode in the Navy' new secret dive bomber, designed to outperform "anything in the world" and which in tests by Curtiss-Wright, its builder, has surpassed even the Navy's hopes.

Lieut. Hugh R. Neiman, jr., U. S. N., chief Navy inspector at the plant, was so impressed with the new plane that he said:

"As far as I personally am concerned, I'll not rest until our Navy carriers are filled with these ships. It is the sweetest dive bomber ever built."

The ship attains a top speed "100 miles an hour faster than existing types," including the famed German Stukas. It carries 2,000 pounds of bombs against a Stuka's 500, flies twice as far as any present model and can remain in the air 4½ hours longer.

It is powered with a Wright cyclone motor which turns up close to 2,000 horsepower. It is armed with a power-operated machine-gun turret sweeping the full circle. It is so new that it was only an experimental number—XSB2C-1—and will not have its first Navy acceptance tests until next week.

The above information is all that may be revealed of the plane's phenomenal performance, and its top speed has never been reached. It may be speculated, however, with reasonable certainty, that this plane may dive well in excess of 500 miles an hour and safely withstand the pull-out strain.

That brings me to the personal part of this story. This is being written two hours after I rode in the gunner's cockpit of the sleek bomber in a dive from 7,000 feet altitude to 3,000 feet, and I haven't recovered yet, although I was not dived at half the plane's maximum speed. My hands jerk so I can hardly hit the keys of my typewriter. My "insides" still feel out of place.

My pilot was Lloyd Child, chief test pilot for Curtiss-Wright, who in January, 1939, dived at the phenomenal 575 miles an hour.

First strapping on a parachute and signing a release in case of an accident, I climbed into the gunner's seat, aided by good healthy pushes because of the weight of the cumbersome parachute and flying "harness." Child gave the ship the gun and in a matter of seconds—we were air-borne. Child heaved on the "stick" and the powerful plane literally stood on its tail so steep was the angle of climb.

At 7,000 feet he pointed the nose straight down and the wind screamed past, although he didn't have his throttle half open.

Had I been the rear man on a bombing mission it would have been my duty to warn Child through the plane's communication phone when 3,000 feet was reached by shouting "mark" to enable him to pull out between 3,000 and 2,500 feet so as not to be destroyed by the explosion of our own bomb. The bomb goes at 2,500 feet. At 3,000 feet, however, and being careful of tender civilian flesh, Child pulled out—much more gently than he could afford to risk against hostile antiaircraft fire. But it was tough enough for me.

The man to go up after me was Lieut. Commander J. F. Tuthill, of the Navy. He is 46. Having a Naval officer instead of a civilian, Child pulled him out at a faster speed than this soft reporter.

Tuthill hasn't fully recovered yet, and frankly said: "That's a game for younger men. I'd choose a sub instead in spite of many people's idea the pig boats are a suicide assignment."

The 'Holdouts' Succumb Finally to Temptation

Mesdames Skinner and Cornell Eye the Screen; Gail Patrick Drops in for a Capital Visit; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE "OLD GUARD," it seems, is beginning to surrender . . . Negotiations between Cornelia Otis Skinner and the Warner Brothers studio are reported to be nearing the dotted-line stage . . . Miss Skinner, "the one-woman repertory company," according to latest report, is to appear in a series of 12 two-reel subjects . . . It will be the first film venture for the distinguished actress whose unique unadramas have been seen here so often, who played Shaw's "Candida" a few seasons back and this spring appeared at the National in her first original starring role in John Golden's production of "Theatre," to be given its Broadway premiere in the fall . . . Now if the robust rumors that Katharine Cornell plans to transmute Shaw's "The Doctor's Dilemma," her current success, into celluloid, hardly a player will be alive who can remember the famous day and year when he refused to sign a motion picture contract . . . So we finally got around to seeing "Meet John Doe," at the Metropolitan, and came away with the renewed conviction that Frank Capra, beyond any of his fellow-directors, has an uncanny faculty of making hokum palatable . . . For instance, that phantom baseball game in the opulent hotel suite, one of the comedy highlights of the picture, never would have been played . . . That is, it never would have been played by grown men anywhere outside a booby-hatch . . . But Capra knew audiences would eat it up—and they did.

We might as well get this thing over with. Those wires weren't as seriously tangled as we thought in yesterday's column. Gracie Barrie WAS originally in "Crazy With the Heat," coming to the Capitol stage next month, but has since been replaced by Sylvia Froos, a top-hole thrush on her own account. That leaves it, as we said, with Gracie for the Earle, June 27, and Sylvia—along with Willie Howard and Diosa Costello—for F Street in July. And there was something here yesterday about "Man Hunt," too. That is the screen feature that will be hooked up, tandem-fashion, with "Crazy With the Heat." And now let's forget the whole thing for a coupla weeks.

Dad Will Have His Innings

That patient paterfamilias, so consistently ignored around the house until it comes time to pay the bills, will be handsomely celebrated at the Metropolitan and Ambassador Theaters, come Father's Day . . . A feature of both bills will be Robert Benchley's highly touted short, "The Forgotten Man," calculated to make all the rest of the family feel pretty cheap . . . Dad, when you get right down to it, is quite a guy . . . And speaking of the Warner Brothers, as we were by implication, they have devised a new kind of "talent quest" . . . Undergraduate students are being signed, under salary, for their vacation periods, without interference with their scholastic studies . . . Those who survive the vacation schooling in screen dramatics will be taken on as permanent members of the studio acting forces.

When her taxi driver barged into the office Monday night with his eyes popping out until you could have scraped them off his face with a board, we knew that Gail Patrick, accomplished actress and noted screen beauty, was in town sight-seeing purely for her own amusement. What we didn't know until 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon was that she was being feted by the Loew executives in the Variety clubrooms at 4. Since this is being written prior to the event—which happens to fall on the dot of our deadline—there will have to be more of it later. What we do know at the moment, is that Miss Patrick will be up there with William Powell and Myrna Loy when they come along to a Loew screen in "Love Crazy."

A Tip to the Local "Barns"

Don Swann, jr., announces that his Hilltop Theater, over at Ellicott City, Md., will present plays each week at Fort George Meade as a part of the recreational activities of the soldiers . . . How about it, Roadside and Cross Roads? . . . Or are the camps all too far away? . . . Sorry to have missed yesterday's press screening of the new Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Blood and Sand," costarring Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell and Rita Hayworth . . . From all reports it is photographed in the most striking Technicolor so far brought to the screen . . . Opens tomorrow at the Palace . . . New films are opening all over the place this weekend, as a matter of fact—as may be observed by reference to today's "Midweek" column.

Hollywood, June 10.

Here's a silly about Edgar Selwyn's old play which he acted in himself many years ago—"Pierre of the Plains." The character's a slap-happy-go-lucky French Canadian. They wrote it into picture form as a starring serial for John Carroll when Metro first signed him. Then someone picked up the script and said, "This is wonderful—let's up the budget, rewrite the story, and give it to Clark Gable." That was done. Then Carroll started getting better in every picture, and they said, "Now we'll go back to our original idea and save it for Carroll." Since John Carroll's performances in "Sunny," "Lady Be Good," "I, James Lewis," his name has become so big that they may end up by giving "Pierre" to a newcomer. Which puts them right back where they started from.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 10 (INS).—I don't suppose Eddie Robinson can ever live down "Little Caesar," even if he should want to forget it. That's the movie that started the vogue for gangster melodramas and made Robinson an important movie figure. Mervyn Leroy directed him in "Little Caesar" and "Five Star Final," both of which were high spots in Robinson's career. Well, to get down to cases, Robinson checks in at M-G-M in two weeks for another Mervyn Leroy movie. This time it is "The New York Story."

Strong effort is being made to keep Joseph Breen in his position as head of the Motion Picture Producers Association and it seems unlikely he can refuse. He has gone to New York and when he comes back he will give his decision. Our article Saturday stating that Will Hays was sicker than anyone knew and might be forced to retire, started an avalanche of denials. A wire from Hays said he never had a nervous breakdown; that he went to work too soon after double pneumonia. He says he is feeling fine and will be on the job soon.

Don't tell me you have forgotten Charlotte Henry, the little girl who got the "Alice in Wonderland" role after almost as much a to-do as David Selznick created finding a Scarlett. As far as Charlotte was concerned, the movies were a mere flash in the pan, for the picture was not a financial success and she wasn't given another chance.

But now those two bright boys, Bill Pine and Bill Thomas, have signed the grown-up Charlotte for one of the top spots in "Flying Blind," with Dick Arlen and Jean Parker.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gladys Robinson's daughter, Jeanne Westerfield, makes her debut as a professional singer in Harrison, Me., on the twenty-third; Sandra Rambeau, who has been publicized as having more jewels than any other woman, has returned to New York; Mrs. Leon Errol has been very sick and confined to her bed; Heather Angel gets a job with Edgar Selwyn in "We Fought at Arques;" Chuck Isaacs, who was back in town over the week-end from camp, being entertained by Ann Rutherford.

Carole Landis stepping out with her old flame, Kenny Morgan, at Bill Jordan's Bar of Music; Barbara Hutton and her son, Lance, dining quietly at the Beverly Tropics; Penny Singleton is opening a knitwear shop in the valley which she is calling "Penny's Knit Wit." Ginger Rogers leaves next week for her ranch on Rogue River, near Medford, Oreg., and she won't return until fall; Edgar Bergen is leaving Charlie McCarthy home when he goes to Evanston to receive his honorary master of arts degree at Northwestern, because he wants to make it a serious occasion.

Sophie Tucker was terrific at Ciro's Sunday night and received an ovation that was heartwarming.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Duce Defies U. S. to Declare War Formally

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 10.—Premier Mussolini told his people today that the United States is at war with the Axis in fact if not legally but that "American intervention" will not prevent a Nazi-Fascist victory.

In effect, Il Duce defied the United States to declare war formally. He assailed President Roosevelt—calling him "Delano Roosevelt"—as an example of "a dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term."

Further, Mussolini said that American intervention in the war would result in bringing to the United States "an authoritarian, totalitarian regime."

The occasion was observance of the first anniversary of Italy's declaration of war. Il Duce spoke before a full-dress session of the Chamber of Fasces and Guilds, the Fascist-style development of what once was the lower house of the Italian Parliament.

The 50-minute speech was carried by loudspeaker to crowds gathered in public squares and by radio throughout the nation, all stores having been ordered closed for the occasion.

U. S. Envoy Absent

United States Ambassador William Phillips was conspicuously absent from the diplomatic gallery of the chamber.

"It should be known that American intervention does not bother us excessively," Il Duce said. "An explicit declaration of war would not modify the actual situation, which is one of de facto war if not de jure.

"American intervention, even completely employed, would be too late, and if not late would not change the terms of the problem.

"American intervention will not give Britain victory, but will prolong the war. It will not limit the space of the war, but will extend it beyond the oceans.

"It will transform the United States regime into an authoritarian, totalitarian regime compared with which the forerunner European regimes—Fascist and Nazi—will find themselves far surpassed and perfected."

Then Mussolini turned to President Roosevelt personally.

Sulla an Amateur

"When it is desired to recall a dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term, Sulla is cited," Il Duce told his countrymen. "All right, Sulla appears a modest amateur in comparison with Delano Roosevelt."

(Lucius Cornelius Sulla, a Roman dictator who lived from 138 to 78 B. C., was noted for a policy of "blood and iron," and was referred to by his enemies as "half-lion, half-fox." He was the first ruler in Roman history to post in the public forum a list of out laws and public enemies, a famed "proscription" which launched a reign of terror.)

Sun-tanned and apparently in vigorous health, Il Duce bounded to the rostrum two steps at a time, and he spoke vigorously, pounding his desk with his fist to emphasize his points.

"By agreement with the German command," he announced, "almost all Greece, including Athens, will be occupied by Italian troops."

Spain, he said, will be left to decide whether she enters the war.

"We are not in any way soliciting the decision of Spain," Il Duce said. "We limit ourselves to thinking and believing that Spain knows on which side stand its proven friends and on which stand its no less proven enemies."

Il Duce spoke bluntly of Italy's situation at home, mentioning "recent critical points in our food situation" and "pessimists and doubters." These latter were not to be found among the masses, he said.

Reports Japan in Line

Reviewing the situation abroad, Mussolini said that "Japan's attitude is in perfect line with the Tripartite pact and that "the Japanese are a proud and loyal people who could not remain indifferent in the face of American aggression against the Axis."

Turkey aided Greece in the war with Italy, he said, but, he added, Turkey's president now is "aware of the sad fate of those who line up with England." Italy continues to follow a policy of "comprehension" toward Turkey, the premier said.

He stressed Italian-German unity, terming ridiculous rumors of strain. "Two peoples, one war," he said.

After stating that "recent critical points in our food situation are related to the distribution of stocks" and warning that "war profiteers will be punished increasingly hard," Il Duce closed on a note of optimism for Fascists.

"The enemy," he said, "is tenacious because he knows the stake is really supreme, but we are more tenacious than he . . .

"Even if the war should last longer than is foreseeable, even if new complications should arise, England cannot win because all her European positions and possibilities have been destroyed and America, whatever she does, cannot substitute them.

"The Axis—revolutionary expression of the new Europe—will win."

Gruber Gets Year In Wire Tapping

New York, June 10 (AP).—Convicted of having tapped the wires of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Jacob Gruber, former assistant chief counsel for the commission, today was sentenced to a year and a day in prison and fined $1,000 by Federal Judge Robert A. Inch.

Gruber was continued in bail of $2,000 pending appeal from his conviction. His accused accomplice, Elizabeth Miller, former switchboard operator for the commission, received a suspended sentence and was placed on probation for one year.

Egypt Asks U. S. To Protest Bombing

The Egyptian government yesterday requested the State Department to deliver on its behalf a formal protest to Italy over the recent aerial bombardment of Alexandria.

Request was made to the State Department by Egyptian Minister Mahoud Hassan Bey. Protest was based on the grounds that Alexandria is an open city. A similar protest is likely to be made to Germany through Iran, which represents Egypt in Berlin.

Two Indicted Here in Draft Conspiracy

Robert Jordan Sopourn, 25, an interior decorator, and his lawyer, Dorsey K. Offutt, 42, were indicted here yesterday on charges of conspiring to prevent Sopourn being drafted.

The prosecution was the first of the kind in Washington.

The District grand jury charged, in three indictments presented before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, that Sopourn was given a 1-A classification by Selective Service Board No. 8 and was ordered to report for induction on April 19.

The indictment charged that Sopourn went to Col. David G. Arnold, No. 8 chairman, on April 14, and discussed the classification, renewing the subject in person and by telephone on April 18.

The indictment charges that Sopourn went to Offutt on April 18 and talked with him, and that Offutt wrote a letter to the Selective Service Board and delivered it, with two sworn statements, to the apartment of Chairman Arnold. The statements were not revealed.

Other transactions, which the grand jury cited as overt acts in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy, were two conversations on April 18 between Offutt and Leonard A. Block, an attorney.

The grand jury said Offutt "aided, abetted, advised and counseled" Sopourn not to obey the order to report for induction. The next day, the grand jury charged, Sopourn failed to report.

The grand jury investigation was conducted by Assistant District Attorneys John L. Laskey and Evan T. Davis. Besides conspiracy, both defendants were charged with violation of the law requiring registrants to report.

'Full Steam' Ordered in U. S. O. Funds' Drive

The District government unit of the United Service Organizations drive for funds to provide recreational facilities for service men was ordered under "full steam" yesterday by Commissioner John Russell Young.

At a special meeting in the District Building, Young suggested that the local allotment of $106,000 from the cty's entire quota of $250,000 was not sufficient to conduct an adequate program.

"We have a big problem here with so many camps nearby," Young said, "and I am fearful the money we are able to get for local spending is not enough. We can't touch a cent of city funds for this work and I feel we should get more from the national drive."

McNutt Speaks at Luncheon

Of the city's $250,000 quota, about $145,000 goes into the country-wide goal of $10,765,000.

Earlier in the day, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt addressed a luncheon meeting of the special gifts unit in the Willard Hotel.

The unit reported contributions totaling $24,892. Yesterday's donations reported by ten teams amounted to $9,576.

Total contributions from all Washington units of the USO campaign will be reported Tuesday, June 17, at a luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A., it was anounced.

Find's Splendid Response

Urging citizens to contribute to the service recreation fund as a "demonstration of American unity," McNutt said he found "splendid response" from other sections of the country during a recent trip into the West, Midwest and South.

At the District Building meeting, called to organize unit teams, Walter Fowler, District budget officer, was named chairman. He appointed Maj. James R. Lusby, disbursing officer, as treasurer.

Lieut. William Exton, U. S. N., told the meeting that the men in uniform "are on your side—now let's get on their's."

DO YOU WANT HOSPITALS....

. . . with more low-cost beds for those in moderate circumstances . . . more service . . . modern, compact, convenient construction?

A Query by the President of Health Security Administration

Washington hospitals want to do their part to meet both defense and normal necessities.

The master plan requested by affiliated hospitals from Health Security Administration proposes the erection of new fireproof buildings and extensions for all our hospitals.

What those in moderate circumstances can afford to pay has been a guiding thought in the planning, which calls for a great increase in semi-private rooms and modern five-bed private wards.

Crowding must be relieved. Delays in getting a bed must disappear. Fireproofing must be assured. In the face of a housing shortage, nurses and personnel must be accommodated on the grounds as much as possible. There must be enough flexibility for instantaneous expansion in case of disaster or epidemic.

Meeting these needs will cost money. Where is it coming from, if not from grants?

Expert hospital accountants have computed that loans can be retired through increased volume and new economies made possible by consolidating into compact, modern structures the services now given in many rambling outmoded buildings.

In just one hospital, for example, $80,000 of present necessary expense can be saved each year simply through the rearrangement and centralization made possible by modern construction. This, with other savings attainable through organized cooperation with other hospitals, will be used to amortize and service the necessary loans.

Do the people of Washington want these benefits? Write us how you feel about it.

Nazi "Correctness"

When one of the survivors of the Zamzam, arriving in New York, was asked about the treatment of passengers who were picked up by the Nazi raider, he said: "The Germans treated the passengers correctly—that is, they didn't machine-gun us—and they patted the children on the head." Doubtless, there was a Nazi photographer present to record the gentle gesture. There usually is. Nazis have patted little heads in a dozen countries, beginning in Austria in 1938. Who does not recall the charming pictures (passed by the German censor) of Czecho-Slovakia's youth fraternizing with their protectors? It has been the same wherever the Nazis have gone, with the possible exception of Greece, where, for some reason, the children seemed more disposed to stick pitchforks into their guests before decking them with flowers. Yes, the Greeks were a disappointment. People who have lived in Germany and, for that matter, in Japan, will tell you that no countries treat the young so lovingly. But it is a trait which can at times be made to appear or disappear, depending upon the situation. For we remember other pictures—pictures of wretched Chinese orphans squatting in the ruins of their homes—pictures of little Polish corpses lying out in the fields where they were struck down. These are the pictures that stick in the mind.

No-Strike Legislation

Congress is not yet through talking about ways and means of curbing strikes in defense industries. But the debates of Monday and yesterday clearly reveal a determination to stop walkouts that are depriving the United States of weapons for defense of ourselves and the friendly powers whose war efforts we are supporting. At the moment there is still a good deal of groping for appropriate measures to carry out this policy. There can be little doubt, however, that suitable legislation can be devised and will be passed.

The present tendency is toward drastic measures. Both of the antistrike amendments which the House attached to the War Department appropriations bill are far-reaching and severe in their effect upon organized labor. One would deny pay to defense-industry workers who maintain a picket line after the National Defense Mediation Board has asked strikers to return to work. The other would prevent the payment of War Department funds to workers or employers refusing for ten days to abide by recommendations of the board. In effect, that would mean compulsory arbitration of management-labor disputes which could not be settled by direct negotiations and mediation.

This expedient has won favor largely because Congress, at the behest of Administration leaders, has failed during the last few months to pass more moderate legislation to keep men on the job while collective bargaining goes forward. Now it may be too late to rely upon the so-called "waiting period" so often advocated heretofore. Yet the attachment of amendments to an appropriations bill is not a satisfactory means of meeting the issue. That makeshift effort to overcome the effects of past negligence may well give way to more comprehensive legislation.

Already the Senate is pushing toward enactment the Connally amendment to the Selective Service Act, giving the President specific power to take over plants in which defense production is "hampered, delayed, impeded or stopped" by strikes or threatened strikes. The Administration is said to be supporting this proposal as a means of indorsing the President's action at Inglewood and of meeting similar emergencies in the future. Undoubtedly the Executive should be able to take possession of factories vital to our defense when other means of keeping them in operation have failed. And there is every reason to believe that such authority will be voted.

Yet obvious dangers lurk in the seizure of plants merely because their employes arbitrarily refuse to return to work. Many radicals and those who follow the Communist Party line are far more interested in forcing Government operation of industries than in improving working conditions. Congress as well as the President ought to avoid giving them added incentive to foment strikes. At best the power to commandeer plants is an emergency weapon. Something more is needed to strengthen the hand of the Defense Mediation Board in settling disputes before work has been stopped and crackdown measures have become necessary. Congress may yet find that the Vinson bill, which requires compliance with a formula for collective bargaining and mediation before any strike may be called, is a suitable basis for the needed legislation. For that policy would be backed up by the "work-or-be-drafted" order and the possibility of more drastic action where it proves to be necessary. The ideal to be sought is still capacity production for defense with a minimum disturbance of normal collective bargaining processes.

Fit To Print

Alsop and Kintner's story in Monday's Post on the "brush" between an American destroyer and a Nazi submarine reminds us to ask again: How much is the public entitled to know about the United States Navy's Atlantic patrol? Navy authorities would reply in a manner most disarming that we are entitled to know just as much as is consistent with the requirements of national defense, no more and no less. In short, little or nothing, for that is the sum total of information officially released. That it is not enough seems clear from the mounting tide of fact and fiction about the patrol. From now on, more and more choice items of information—and perhaps of misinformation—about this vital defense function will become available, one way or another, to editors and reporters. Should they maintain a discreet silence or should they print the news? The problem grows steadily more difficult, not only in connection with the patrol but also in connection with the many other phases of the defense program.

Several months ago The Post called for a more specific formula that would define news limits beyond which the press could not properly go. None has been forthcoming. To be sure, consultation with the press branches of the armed services is recommended, but, in general, the system of voluntary censorship is still in effect. However, as was proved in World War I and at various times this year, notably when H. M. S. Malaya limped into New York harbor for repairs, self-censorship is not the answer. It permits such latitude of interpretation as to defeat its very purpose. Of course, the Navy and War Departments can clamp down on the official release of news, as, indeed, they have, increasingly, in recent months. But information continues to sift out and to complicate the duties of the press.

Last Saturday, British editors, educators, union leaders and others, meeting in London, bitterly attacked their official censorship for withholding unpalatable facts. "The virility and endurance of our people depend on their unrestricted freedom to ask and their right to be answered," it was declared. So far we have no defeats in the field to explain away. But, if we had, the repressive methods pursued by the British censorship would hardly be acceptable to the American public. If it is not intended to create a central agency, such as the Creel Committee, which functioned in 1917-18 as America's official censor, then this should be made clear. It would bring to the fore the whole question of voluntary censorship and emphasize the wisdom, we believe, of permitting the press to print all the news without restriction. Certainly official supervision of the cables, the radio, and foreign mail would reduce, if not eliminate, the chance of uncensored newspaper stories falling into enemy hands until too late to be of use. During the emergency a free press, in fact as well as in name, could be unquestionably the greatest single factor in sustaining public confidence in the Government's course.

Crisis For Labor

So much has been said of the crisis that is facing the Nation as a result of the labor disturbances on the West Coast that we are apt to forget that organized labor is facing a crisis of its own. The issue has been sharply defined by the marching of soldiers into the North American aviation plant. And the issue is this: labor must get rid of its subversive and irresponsible leadership or face repeated clashes with Federal authority and consequent danger of disintegration. It is encouraging that the responsible leaders are fully aware of the gravity of the crisis. As one example, Philip Murray, head of the C. I. O., has administered rebukes to the leaders of "wildcat strikes" on the West Coast, and the reason for the concern of Mr. Murray and many of his associates is that they undoubtedly see the grave dangers for organized labor in these attempts on the part of local factions to defy the national will. However, there is little indication that the rank and file in some unions is ready to rally around these responsible national leaders in preference to the rabble rousers who rise to prominence by calling outlaw walkouts.

The trouble is not solely one of communism, though it is clear, as Attorney General Jackson has pointed out, that the Moscow influence is at work at strategic points. Avowed Communists in positions of union leadership, however, are not numerous. Far more dangerous to labor's best interests are those agitators who follow the party line without daring to wear its colors. Experience has now proved beyond doubt that leaders of this type who call strikes for political purposes do so with no regard for the long-term interests of their followers, but, on the contrary, are bent on wrecking the unions they head. It is astonishing that relatively few of the organized workers seem to appreciate this situation. They should know that if the American people have to choose between a misguided type of unionism and efficient production for national defense, there is no question as to what the choice will be.

A few months ago the relatively small number of unions which tolerated subversive leadership were being urged to purge themselves in the national interest. Now the emphasis has shifted. Delay on the part of organized labor in meeting its problem has forced the Government to act, though the steps, even the use of troops at Los Angeles, are not antiunion moves. Rather, the Government is supporting and enforcing the stand taken by responsible labor leaders. The policy thus laid down, however, may produce grave reactions against organized labor unless the unions themselves move resolutely to oust their Ortons and their party-liners from positions of leadership. It would thus be the part of elementary prudence for the unions themselves to act in their own defense.

Cyprus And Syria

After the fall of Crete it was widely assumed that the next German objective would be the island of Cyprus, which lies within close striking distance of the Syrian and Palestinian coasts. Actually it was the British and their Free French allies who struck first—in Syria—and the success of their venture is indicated by the report that they are now on the outskirts of Damascus. For the time being Cyprus is thus out of the picture. That it will remain out of the picture for long is to be doubted, however. Indeed, according to a German radio report from Norway, violent and continuous assaults on the island by waves of Axis planes have occurred during the past 48 hours. The validity of this report remains to be confirmed. But whether true or not, and it may be only a manifestation of the endless war of nerves, it is problematical whether air attacks on Cyprus can be followed up, as they were in Crete, by the actual landing of troops. Crete was less than 100 miles away from the nearest German air bases on the Greek mainland. Cyprus, however, is several hundred miles removed from the Island of Rhodes, the nearest Axis air base.

Nonetheless, with the British busy in Syria and Egypt, the Axis might attempt an assault on Cyprus as a diversion. Although a great part of the island is mountainous, with one peak in the south reaching a height of 6,406 feet, the broad plain between the two great mountain ranges of Cyprus extends for a distance of nearly 60 miles from Famagusta, the island's principal harbor, to Morphou, on the west coast, and has a breadth of between 10 and 20 miles. In that valley, crash landings of the kind which the Germans employed with such success in the conquest of Crete are possible in the event that the British prevent an Axis occupation of the air fields.

Cyprus has a long history. It has been ruled by Greece, Persia, Egypt, Rome, the Arabs, the Knights Templars, the Venetians, the Turks, and, since 1878, has been in British hands. Lacking good harbors, it has never been transformed into a military and naval base of the Malta or Gibraltar variety. Yet its strategic importance is considerable, and, as long as it remains in their hands, Cyprus is of enormous value to the British.

Hopeful Note

The demonstrated inventive genius of Charles F. Kettering will rivet attention upon the prediction he made in Detroit the other day that a device that will drive the submarine from the seas will be completed and in operation "within a reasonable time." More than anything else the present war is a war of transportation. That is why the Battle of the Atlantic is of such surpassing importance. For if the Germans succeed by means of submarines, long-range bombers and mines in cutting Britain's life line in that sea, the British will lose the war. And at the present time at least half of Britain's staggering losses in shipping tonnage are the results of depredations attributable to the activities of U-boats. However, the antisubmarine device Mr. Kettering forecast has not yet been produced. And in the meantime the British are not winning, but are losing the Battle of the Atlantic, with the result that each week sees them nearer the exhaustion of their food and raw material reserves. The need of far-reaching American action to make certain that goods vouchsafed Great Britain under the lease-lend law do actually reach her is thus as paramount as ever. Mr. Kettering makes us hopeful, but he should not make us complacent.

VALE

Lady, at your feet I place
This bright small Pegasus, whose race
Ended too soon and quietly
To be called catastrophe.
He struck no lightning from the cloud
His small hoofs smote; he sent no proud
Thunder rolling through the sky
That did not flinch when he flashed by.
His flight achieved this single thing—
Knowledge too grave for lift of wing.
Now he crops bitter who drank sweet
And lies down, tethered, at your feet.

For Negotiated Peace

We Americans may as well admit, 1, that Germany now controls western Europe; 2, that British policy of dominating Europe by dividing the continent and supplying the balance of power is gone; 3, that the British Empire, though ruined in prestige, is territorially intact; 4, that there is nothing much the United States can do about it, and, 5, that this present situation is probably as good as any now in prospect from which to negotiate a peace.

I do not mean to say that Britain, aided by the United States, could not continue the war. That could be done, to be sure. But there is little hope that it would do much else than kill millions of young men and waste hundreds of billions of wealth to no purpose. Britain has been driven off the continent completely, she has not been able to achieve air supremacy, and her shipping is being sunk twice as fast as it can be replaced from any source. These are undeniable and inescapable facts and we Americans are fools if we do not face them realistically.

Undoubtedly Germany, having got control of western Europe, would be glad to negotiate a generous peace with Britain on the basis of acceptance of that fact. If Britain refuses to negotiate upon that basis, and if we aid and abet her in such refusal, it may mean a quick and terrible blitzkrieg of Britain and utter destruction of the empire. That failing, it means a long, horrible struggle with the outcome in doubt. Wouldn't it be better for Britain to salvage what she can now?

The Nation's Health

As one of your recent correspondents points out, it's too bad we must have a war in order to discover and become conscious of our 46 per cent of physically unfit folks. A war does things. It lifts a lot of people bodily out of the body and lifts the rest of us out of our lethargy. It is worth some kind of a war to learn more about nutrition, as we are now doing, since our principal instructors in this field have always been the radio advertisers. And here is one vote for a more active Department of Health setup in the Government.

And if anyone knows how to capture the pep, the friendliness, the vision and the job-creation system that a war brings on and make them permanent, and will reveal that secret to us, it may end wars.

Picketing

Your editorial, "Untenable Position," moves me to ask why you find it necessary to go so far afield to point out defective methods in dealing with labor strikes when you have a glaring example of lawlessness within three blocks of The Post building?

Take a look at the form of picketing at the S. & W. Cafeteria in the Washington Building. A double line of alleged workers substantially block the entrances on either side, compelling patrons to crowd their way through to reach the restaurant, and "buck the line" again on their way out. Pedestrians, too, are forced to turn aside.

The issue here is not the relative merits contained in a labor dispute, but whether or not hungry women must daily endure the torment of being rudely jostled and manifestly obstructed by a form of picketing long since banned by police authorities in other municipalities. It is said that the Police Department in Washington contends that it is restricted by a Supreme Court decision from exercising a proper supervision over pickets—but such decision is unknown or disregarded elsewhere.

However, there is no court in the land that has up to now granted permission to two groups of 35 persons to form an endless chain of moving obstruction to prevent other persons from a lawful use of a public sidewalk.

Some Considerations For Postwar Reconstruction

Statements on peace objectives by Secretary Hull, Anthony Eden and Pope Pius have officially broached the question of world reconstruction. Specific conditions at the end of the war cannot be definitely foreseen, but certain fairly well established principles affecting the settlement are now in evidence. Among them the following may be stated:

1. The politico-social stability and economic health of Europe depend upon establishment of some unified order for the Continent. This follows from the development of land communications and air power. Each political sovereignty should be based upon a natural economic unit embracing a sufficient range of natural resources and industrial areas to form a rounded, reciprocating economy, with control over its major materials and markets. Such units in future will tend toward continental proportions because the development of aviation makes defense against aggression by land more difficult and against aggression from the sea easier. Europe, together with the Near East, forms a fairly contained economic unit with a large variety of industries and materials.

2. The war has already resulted in the fall of Europe as leading center of world civilization and focal point of world industry. Europe under the Hitler regime is reduced to a prison economy operated by forced labor, always inefficient and costly, and the fundamental bases of social order are being systematically subverted. If the German control collapses through an Anglo-American victory, Europe may be expected to collapse with it and pass through a period of revolution.

3. Consequently, the old system based upon the balance of power in Europe cannot be firmly or permanently reestablished: there will be no stable states on the Continent to hold the strategic points like Bohemia and the Rhine frontier. Britain cannot, directly or indirectly, control the Channel ports which are vulnerable to air attack from the land side and, once taken, cannot be recaptured by Britain from the sea against land-based planes. Hence the logical British policy is to move closer to the Continent, become in some degree a continental power, and seek to serve as liaison between an eventually restored and united Europe and the Anglo-Saxon world. A complete victory in this war might for a time restore the appearance of British ascendancy over the Continent, of course, but it would be illusory.

4. The traditional American system of national security is also gone, since it was based upon the Monroe Doctrine and Anglo-Saxon control of the Atlantic which, in turn, depends upon stability and balance in Europe and, especially, assured British domination of the Channel ports. (The Monroe Doctrine, of course, while formally a unilateral declaration, is really and historically founded upon a tacit Anglo-American understanding—supplemented by parallel policies in the Orient—to maintain control of sea power against any concerted threat from Europe.)

As a result the United States is forced to consider the problem of a new method of permanent national defense. The only two alternatives are complete isolation against a world either enslaved or in chaos or else an international program of cooperation with extra-European elements.

5. Collapse of Europe and unsettlement at the close of the war will bring severe economic depression and social unrest (already in evidence in some areas) to the "colonial" and economically dependent countries producing raw materials for export. Revolutionary forces will be set in motion which can only be combated by (1) a substantial degree of freedom for colonial peoples; (2) equality of status for countries like China and the nations of Latin America, and (3) native industrial development (by aid of American capital) for such countries, to raise their economic power and make local markets for their raw materials.

6. It is apparent that true world federation, "union now," or even union with Britain, is impracticable. The disparities between countries are too great, the democracies of Europe are in ruins with a very obscure future, and Great Britain is too closely linked with Europe for any complete amalgamation with the United States.

7. A desirable form of world organization to meet, in some reasonable degree, the needs and conditions might embrace the following:

(a) A united Europe, with an over-all economic and political system but recognizing national cultural autonomy. (A rather distant prospect.)

(b) A loose international association or comity composed of Europe, Great Britain, the United States, Canada, the Anzacs, South Africa, the Latin-American countries, India, China and possibly the Dutch East Indies. Each of these should be autonomous in local government, with gradations of "sovereignty" and citizenship—ideas adapted from the British and American systems of "dominion" and "territorial" status. Anglo-Saxon sea power would form the nucleus of military force.

Even so comparatively modest a sketch as this represents an ideal which would admittedly be very difficult of realization. The conditions produced by this war and its aftermath definitely suggest the possibility of a long period, perhaps of the order of two or three decades, during which revolution, war and civil wars will be prevalent over large areas of the earth. Russia can be counted upon to be a major disturbing element in one way or another.

It will be extremely difficult for American policy to hold to the ideal of a world order of law and freedom; consistent adherence to the policy probably will not be seen. The demand for American isolation may be expected to persist or be revived after the war. But such a policy, consigning the world to the reign of lawlessness and war as its natural state, would be to invite a new period of Dark Ages. Aside from winning the war, it seems most essential that this country should hold onto and keep on promoting in all possible ways the concept of a free world order.

It may be added that the foregoing is not intended as a blueprint of anything to be definitely realized at any particular time, but merely a sketch embodying some of the basic principles and recognizing some of the main disturbing factors. It may represent in vague outline something that the world is slowly moving towards, a visual image of the sort that must be carried in the mind's eye if we are to hold to any purpose in the disordered years that may lie ahead. The objective for which this country fights is the moral leadership of the world and preservation of the light of Western civilization, which has already been blown out in Europe. It [illegible] out to be "the cause," need of which has been so widely [illegible] last years.

The Post Impressionist

Quality, Not Quantity

Be they souls of wit or just plain, thrifty word-economists, those people who go in for clipped monosyllabic conversation, and thereby earn for themselves reputations for discreet taciturnity, afford more talkative folks with many entertaining anecdotes.

There was, for example, the French physician who was widely known to detest lengthy, drawn-out consultations. One day a woman who had been bitten by a dog and who knew the doctor's reputation appeared in his office. Without a word she bared her arm and disclosed the wound. The doctor looked at it.

"Scratch?"

"Bite."

"Cat?"

"Dog."

"Today?"

"Yesterday."

"Hurt?"

"No."

With the greatest restraint, the tale goes, the good doctor kept himself from hugging the lady.

Betrothal, or getting engaged, is a very verbose and complicated thing in the movies. Plighting plain and fancy troths is, indeed, one of the prime specialties out in Hollywood. They really go to work on them.

The female member sits in animated suspension while the male goes through the tortures of the tongue-tied. However mature he may be up to that point, the latter invariably turns adolescent when faced with the sudden desire for matrimony. He stutters, stammers, begins in the middle, doubles back to the beginning, jumps back to the middle, twists his hat in his hands, sits on it, gets up, starts all over again—this goes on for a reel or two until the girl tells him she will. He never actually asks her, but she is right in assuming that that is his intention.

When finally his unasked proposal has been accepted, he almost invariably goes mildly insane—hugs the maid, knocks over a box of chocolates and a few occasional pieces of furniture, finally races out the door and falls on his face on the curb.

Yes, indeed; the prerequisite course to marriage is exciting and complicated, and very wordy in the movies. But though I am untried at this sort of thing myself as yet, I suspect that the more natural way of it is to be found in the pages of fiction.

Telling the boy, David Copperfield, to inform Peggotty that "Barkis is willin'" was sufficient to launch Barkis on the sea of matrimony.

And Maria Chapdelaine, Louis Hemon's French-Canadian heroine, was betrothed somewhat in this manner:

Francois and Maria, their pails filled with blueberries, sit down in the shade to wait for the other cherry pickers.

Francois says: "I go back to town next week to work on the dam. But I won't touch a drop, Maria, not a drop."

He waits. "Perhaps . . . you have heard something against me?"

"No."

"It's true I used to take a drop too much quite often. But you know when a fellow's been working six months in the woods—— But that's all over."

Maria was properly silent.

"And it's also true that I used to curse. Living with a rough bunch in the woods and on the rivers, you get used to it. Yes, I used to curse quite a bit . . . But that's over, Maria. I'll work all summer at $2.50 a day, and I'll put some by . . . Next spring I'll have about $300 saved up, clear, and I'll come back."

Another deep pause

"You will still be here . . . next spring?"

"Yes."

And Maria and Francois were engaged. I think that is more like it.

When the great Alexander visited the lowly cynic, Diogenes, in his tub, he undoubtedly expected a flustered and lengthy powwow and to-do. But Diogenes was indifferent to Alexander's brilliance. In fact, he found the mighty King a better door than a window.

Alexander opened: "I am Alexander the Great." That ought to floor the crusty old codger, he must have thought.

Diogenes was practically floored already, but in no figurative sense. Still reclining at his ease in his tub, he replied succinctly: "And I am Diogenes the Cynic."

The great Alexander caught this on the chin, and for a minute, it looked as if it might floor him. But he recovered adroitly. Majesty, charity, largesse: that was the way to make the old dog come crawling.

"Is there anything you would like me to do for you?" he asked in the regal manner.

He had not long to wait for his reply.

"Yes; get out of my sunlight."

But of all twice-told tales of taciturnity and brevity, I like best the story of the two miners who lived together in a cabin far from civilization. Each evening they would sit in front of their cabin in the sunset, placidly smoking their pipes and saying never a word.

One evening the pounding of a horse's hooves was heard coming along the trail, and a few minutes later a solitary rider passed the cabin.

One miner looked toward his companion. "Indian."

The other miner nodded in agreement. "Roan."

The first miner shook his head. "Bay."

The next morning when the first miner got up he found the second all saddled up.

"Leavin'?" he asked.

"Yup. Too much arguin' around here."

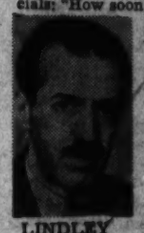
When Do We Shoot?

By Ernest K. Lindley

How Close To Actual War Are We?



LINDLEY

WITHIN the last ten days this correspondent, like many others, has asked many Government officials: "How soon do you expect us to be in a shooting war?" At least six to whom this inquiry was directed are both high in official circles and close to the President (the two do not always go together).

One replied: "We'll be in it up to our necks by the middle of July. All hell is going to break loose."

Another said: "I'm not convinced yet that we will do any shooting at any time—except perhaps for an occasional brush on the oceans, which the Nazis will ignore."

The other answers lay in between these. Both the extreme forecasts quoted above came from men who are excellently placed to receive military and diplomatic information and to judge the President's mind. Their divergence readily indicates why others less intimately associated with the President are unable to prognosticate exactly where we are going and how fast.

THE PRESIDENT has set forth clearly the aims of his foreign policy and the grand strategy by which he believes that the Axis and its satellites can be defeated. He has not said how far he believes we may have to go in naval, aerial and military action to make the strategy work.

As the channels of communication are organized, the President is the only man in Washington who has all the information available. Outside the State, War and Navy Departments, Cabinet members have, as a rule, only the data which he chooses to pass on. And none of those departments has all the information which is funneled to him.

But with all the knowledge that is uniquely in his possession, the President cannot be sure. There are too many imponderables. And every action that is proposed is weighed by him, consciously or unconsciously, with reference to American public opinion.

From the beginning of the war he has acted less aggressively and less speedily than the "forward" elements in the country, and his Administration, wanted him to act. He has gone farther and more rapidly, of course, than the isolationists wished to go. But he has dragged most of the latter with him. Most of them now favor material aid to England.

BUT WHILE the President keeps our role short of what his more militant advisers envision as immediately desirable, if not necessary, he is by no means passive. On the diplomatic front our policy is active. The fields in which diplomacy, backed by question marks about the use of our armed forces, is still useful have been narrowed but they have not vanished.

The two principal powers on which we are exerting diplomatic pressure are France and Japan. The extremists repeatedly have attacked the State Department, and so indirectly the President, for temporizing with the French and the Japs.

The status of Vichy as a sort of trusty in the Nazi prison is now generally recognized. But time was gained by offering Vichy an alternative to active collaboration with Hitler. And the continual reminders of the friendship of the United States for the French people and the France that was undoubtedly make it more difficult for the Petain-Darlan combination to deliver what Hitler wants them to deliver.

OUR GOVERNMENT lost hope some time ago of salvaging much out of the Vichy government, but it retained hope of salvaging something out of Gen. Weygand in north Africa. This hope has not been entirely destroyed. It is possible that the firm stand taken by Secretary Hull has strengthened Weygand and, through him, put some restraints on Petain. At the same time it reminded the French in Syria where we stood. As this is written it is too early to say whether Hull's diplomatic operations materially affected the Syrian situation, still less what their eventual effect on Weygand will be. But the gains which were sought would be worth a good many convoys.

In the Far East, likewise, the Administration has tried to convince the Japanese that we do not wish to fight them, but that if they insist on expanding the war, we may have to, with no doubt in our minds as to the result. Always we have kept open to the Japanese an honorable alternative to cooperation with the Axis and an alternative which we believe offers a brighter future to the Japanese.

THE JAPANESE government may not see it our way, although certainly their wisest statesmen do. No one can say where they will end up. But nothing has been lost by giving them time to think it over. We are stronger, relatively, than we were last fall, and they are weaker.

Those who want us to rush into acknowledged formal war with Germany sometimes forget that the Japanese are pledged to make war on us if we do so. They are not pledged to attack us if Germany or Italy is the aggressor against us. The difference may be finespun, but it is not meaningless to a proud people.

The picture is much too complex to justify a judgment, even by the next-best informed, as to whether the President is doing exactly what is best for our national interest. It can be said only that the extremists on both sides are dissatisfied, which means that he is being neither stampeded nor hamstrung.

Case History

SOME DAYS I shoot the sun in essays of the "whither-are-we-drifting?" type, and other days I give them the old who, what, when, where, why and how-come? This is one of those other days, and the subject of our study is Harry Van Arsdale, the business agent of Local 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which is commonly said to be the biggest local, numerically, in the entire American Federation of Labor. It is a New York union and is really an industrial union of the C. I. O. type, for the majority of its members are not electricians at all but factory workers who make fixtures and the like. They have an inferior, or robot, status in the union, lacking the voting powers of the skilled electricians.

Some months ago Mrs. Roosevelt appeared at a strike meeting of some of these factory workers in New York and said, among other things, that she thought all workers ought to join unions. It is possible that the lady was just speaking off the end of her tongue or the top of her head and didn't know the background of the union, but if she didn't she should have, and if she did her advice was presumptuous from one in her position.

MR. VAN ARSDALE was at that very time under indictment on a charge of rioting in connection with that very strike, and he has since been convicted and sentenced to serve from one to two years in Sing Sing. This is not his first conviction but his second, and, although his conviction in the previous case was reversed and the complaint finally was dismissed, the history of that job will give you an idea.

On February 24, 1933, William Sorensen and Frank Dooner, members of Local 3, were shot in a factional fracas at the headquarters of Local 3. Sorensen was hit twice, in the shoulder and stomach, and Dooner once, in the head. Within an hour after the shooting Sorensen, in a statement, said: "Van Arsdale pulled a gun. He fired at me, and the first bullet hit me in the stomach. He fired another shot at me."

At Bellevue Hospital, Dooner said Van Arsdale had no gun, but he later said someone had threatened him if he did not keep his mouth shut.

One Henry Godell, also a union member, who entered the hall with Sorensen, Dooner and their faction, was not available to testify in the subsequent trial. He was waylaid and killed near his home by a party of gunmen four months after the gunplay in the headquarters. No arrests.

DURING the trial Sorensen said Godell helped him to his feet when he fell.

"Is he dead or alive?" the prosecutor asked.

"He is dead," Sorensen replied. "He was murdered right afterward."

This question and the answer were protested and stricken out.

A preliminary hearing of the charge against Van Arsdale of shooting Sorensen and Dooner was held during the morning of May 27, 1933, at which Adelbert Letscher, another member of the opposition, gave testimony. A few hours later, as he was walking along the street, he was attacked from behind by a man who threw acid in his face. He later testified as to this, and this testimony, too, was stricken out. Indeed, the reversal of the conviction was based, in part, on the fact that the prosecutor, nevertheless, referred to this testimony in summing up.

Van Arsdale's sentence was from 6 to 12 years in Sing Sing, but the case was sent back on December 7, 1934, for retrial.

It was dismissed on May 1, 1935, on the recommendation of Robert Santangelo, an assistant district attorney, who wrote for the record that the injured men "have stated that they are no longer desirous of appearing against the defendants."

"The undersigned has also learned," Mr. Santangelo informed the court, "that because of the injuries which they suffered the union, on account of an action brought by them against it, settled their claims for the injuries suffered by them in the amount of $15,000."

COULD IT have been, then, that $15,000 of the workers' money was handed over to the two injured brothers to persuade them to abandon the people's case against a man accused of a serious crime?

That would be a most unpleasant suggestion, involving the compounding of a felony, and it was anticipated and forefended by the brothers. True, Brother Van Arsdale was boss of the union, but it was just a happy coincidence that after the wounded brothers were promised $15,000 out of the pockets of their fellow-workers they withdrew their complaint.

"They stated to the undersigned," Mr. Santangelo informed the court, "that they are not indicating their desire to withdraw this complaint because of this consideration but because the best interests of the union warrant that attitude."

Breathes there a soul so evil as to think otherwise?

The Hobbles On Our National Will

THE WORST DEFECTS of the President's policy of limited frankness with Congress and the people were luridly displayed by Ambassador John G. Winant's visit to the Capitol last Saturday. In the course of a round of calls, Winant dropped in to see Vice President Henry A. Wallace. Wallace invited Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and two or three other Senators to have a talk with the returned Ambassador about conditions in Britain. And after the talk one of the Senators passed on what he understood Winant had said to the waiting newspapermen.

ALSOP

Winant is a slow speaker, given to elisions, and to leaving points obvious to him to be inferred by his audience. The Senators were fearful this country was "investing in a losing war," and Winant wished to persuade them this was not so. No doubt the Senator who gave the newspapers his version of Winant's remarks preferred to look on the bright side. And thus stories were printed all over the country, the sense of which was summed up in the banner headline carried by one of the best known, most ably edited American newspapers: "Winant says British can win without America in war."

THIS IS, unfortunately, the precise contrary of what Winant believes. The fault was not Winant's, or the Senators,' or the newspapermen's. The fault was in the failure of the White House to disclose the complete facts of the war situation, however bleak, which encourages confusion of this sort.

There cannot be the slightest doubt that Winant was grossly misrepresented by the second-hand summary of his views. Winant himself was so disturbed that when he received the early editions of the Sunday papers on Saturday evening, he did his best to have at least one of the stories killed. In the interval, your correspondents have again investigated the purpose of Winant's return to Washington. They have received positive assurance, from the highest possible sources, that Winant's sole motive in leaving his post was to warn the President in person, with all the force at his command, that to delay further was to court disaster.

In fact, Winant is not only far from thinking Britain can win the war without America as a fighting partner, he is also firmly convinced that German victory may be the outcome unless this country accepts full fighting partnership with Britain in the immediate future. He does not fear the British will not fight to the finish if this country is squarely with them, or that America and Britain together will not be able to win the war in the end. His confidence in the future, if this country bears its part in the war, was what he was trying to convey to the Senators, whose defeatist inclinations he had to combat. Many of his opinions, such as his opinion of the Mediterranean situation, were accurately reported.

BUT HIS judgment of the total war picture was not reported at all. It is a simple judgment, and one which should be shared by every intelligent newspaper reader. He starts with the assumption that however magnificent a nation's courage may be, it will fail if no longer bolstered by hope. Britain's only hope, he argues, is active aid from this country. So far the British have withstood without flinching such a grinding, cruel attrition as few nations in history have experienced. They will continue to take whatever blows may be showered upon them, so long as their hopes are still alive.

Their morale will crack at last, however, Winant believes, if their hopes are disappointed, and they find themselves permanently condemned to a grim defensive battle, with defeat the only possible conclusion. The little people of Britain, who do not know the facts, may be ready to fight on. Winston Churchill, who knows the facts but prefers suicide to surrender, will certainly wish to fight on. But the British equivalent of the French men of Vichy will crawl out of the political woodwork. Terms dictated by Germany will be accepted. And this country will find itself beleaguered, surrounded, without a single ally, lacking the resources needed for defense, in a Nazi-dominated world.

THAT IS WHAT Ambassador Winant came here to tell the President, and what he now has told the President. Nor is he alone in holding this dark view. Virtually all the President's competent advisers, both on high policy and on technical military and naval matters, have been urging the same view on him for many weeks. A single dissent from it, by a man in an important position, would be hard to find at the State, War or Navy Department. Among the men here who know how matters stand, the sense of urgency is reaching the point of desperation.

In his distress over the inaccurate reports of his position, Winant at first wished to issue a public statement telling everything he had come to say at the White House. He was dissuaded from doing so, for unexplained reasons. The men around the President can hardly speak out unless he gives them the lead.

IN HIS MESSAGE to the Nation, the President sketched in most of the facts of the war situation, but failed to announce action or declare it must be taken promptly. Thus the minds of most people, men in the street and members of Congress alike, were left in the same puzzled confusion which was the cause of Winant's mishap with the Senators. If the President would tell the people, "We can win this war fighting at Britain's side, but will certainly lose it if we don't," both members of Congress and men in the street can be counted on to respond firmly and courageously. But only clear-speaking and bold leadership will remove the hobbles from the national will.

KINTNER

A Roman General's Opinion Of 'Military Critics'

Lucius Aemilius Paulus, a Roman consul, who had been selected to conduct the war with the Macedonians, 168 B. C., went out from the Senate-house into the assembly of the people and addressed them as follows:

"In every circle, and, truly, at every table, there are people who lead armies into Macedonia; who know where the camp ought to be placed; what posts ought to be occupied by troops; when and through what pass that territory should be entered; where magazines should be formed; how provisions should be conveyed by land and sea; and when it is proper to engage the enemy, when to lie quiet. And they not only determine what is best to be done, but if anything is done in any other manner than what they have pointed out, they arraign the consul, as if he were on trial before them. There are great impediments to those who have the management of affairs; for every one cannot encounter injurious reports with the same constancy and firmness of mind as Fabius did, who chose to let his own ability be questioned through the folly of the people, rather than to mismanage the public business with a high reputation. I am not one of those who think that commanders ought at no time to receive advice; on the contrary, I should deem that man more proud than wise, who regulated every proceeding by the standard of his own single judgment. What then is my opinion? That commanders should be counseled, chiefly, by persons of known talent; by those who have made the art of war their particular study, and whose knowledge is derived from experience; from those who are present at the scene of action, who see the country, who see the enemy; who see the advantages that occasions offer, and who, like people embarked in the same ship, are sharers of the danger. If, therefore, any one thinks himself qualified to give advice respecting the war which I am to conduct, which may prove advantageous to the public, let him not refuse his assistance to the state, but let him come with me into Macedonia. He shall be furnished with a ship, a horse, a tent; even his traveling charges shall be defrayed. But if he thinks this too much trouble, and prefers the repose of a city life to the toils of war, let him not, on land, assume the office of a pilot. The city, in itself, furnishes abundance of topics for conversation; let it confine its passion for talking within its own precincts, and rest assured that we shall pay no attention to any councils but such as shall be framed within our camp."

Wagner Labor Act

By Mark Sullivan

Need For Amendment

IT IS OF UTMOST importance that the country be clear about what has happened. President Roosevelt, in ordering the Army to act about the California strike, issued two official documents. One was his order to the Army, the other a statement to the public. In these two documents are to be found all that exists of official reason for the President's action. In these documents are everything the President felt he had of principle upon which to base his action. The reasons, as given by the President, come down to three—indeed, as will be seen, they amount to one:

The plant "has contracts with the United States for the manufacture of military airplanes."

The President had previously, on May 27, declared an "unlimited national emergency." And "the objectives of said proclamation are jeopardized and the ability of the United States to obtain aircraft essential to its armed forces and to the national defense is seriously impaired.

"The United States own aircraft in the course of production, raw material, machinery and other property situated in the said plant."

Those are all the reasons for the President's action. The President mentioned another circumstance, which is a circumstance and not a principle. He pointed out that the strike had been referred to an official body, the National Defense Mediation Board; that the representatives of the workers had agreed that the workers should "continue production during mediation;" and that this agreement had been broken.

THIS LATTER reason is a circumstance, rather than a principle. Had the breaking of the agreement occurred in the course of an ordinary strike, not involving defense work, no one supposes the President would have regarded such breach of agreement as reason for calling out the Army. The whole of the principle upon which the President's action rests comes down to this: The plant was engaged in defense work, at a time when the President had proclaimed a national emergency, in anticipation of possible war.

This leaves the country in an extraordinary condition. It leaves the country without authoritative remedy for any strike except those arising in the extremely narrow category here defined. For any ordinary strike, in any plant not doing defense work, there is no remedy. For any strike at any time other than after the President has proclaimed an emergency, there is no remedy. For any strike whatever, at any time whatever, there is no remedy except calling out the Army. This is a startling condition.

(Let it not be said that the National Defense Mediation Board is any remedy. That the board is not a remedy is proved by this very strike.)

Why is the country without a remedy for strikes? The reason is, mainly, resistance of the New Deal against modification of the Wagner Labor Relations Act. This can be seen by a very brief resume of recent history.

The Wagner Labor Relations Act was enacted in June 1935. The effect of it was to take practically the whole field of labor relations into the domain of the Federal Government at Washington. The Wagner Labor Relations Act superseded the many statutory remedies and preventives of strikes which previously had existed in State laws. Labor relations became, almost exclusively, a Federal function, directed from Washington. If strikes were to be averted or remedied, it must be done by or under the Labor Relations Act.

After some 3 years experience with the Labor Relations Act, there was practically universal agreement that it needed amendment. That was agreed to not only by employers but by the American Federation of Labor.

IN JANUARY, 1939, Congress, set about amending the act. Proposed amendments were introduced in both House and Senate. In the House a special committee was set up to investigate the labor board. The committee held prolonged hearings and reported to the House. The House, by a vote of 258 to 129, adopted several amendments to the Labor Act. That was June 7, last year.

But action by the House accomplished nothing unless the Senate acted also. In the Senate, during 2½ years up to the present time, no action was taken. Suggested amendments never emerged from the Senate Labor Committee.

When the House takes an action by a vote of 2 to 1, and the Senate acts not at all, there must be a reason. The reason, as generally felt, whether accurately or not, was that New Dealers in the Senate were reluctant to see amendment of the Labor Act. Certainly the New Deal generally was reluctant.

The Labor Act stands today, unamended. The Labor Act gives rise to the condition now conspicuous. And it is unthinkable that Congress will tolerate a condition in which there is no authoritative remedy for strikes, in which the only remedy is in the hands of the President, and takes the form of calling out troops.

When Congress sets about acting, the action should not be inspired by the emergency of war and defense. Action thus inspired would be likely to be unduly repressive. The better path of Congress is to take up again the amendments to the Labor Relations Act which the House, acting in a normal time, a year ago, adopted by a vote of 2 to 1.

Grim Balance Sheet

Italy's Year Of War

BENITO MUSSOLINI was boastful and confident in the speech he made commemorating the anniversary of Italy's entry into the war. But his boasts have a hollow ring and his confident predictions of an ultimate Axis victory will deepen the gloom of the Italian people rather than raise their spirits.

NOVER

The fact of the matter is that Italy lost the war the day she entered it. On that day—June 10, 1940—Mussolini proclaimed: "The hour marked ours by destiny is sounding in the sky of our country. This is the hour of irrevocable decisions."

Actually it was the hour when Italy's honor was trampled in the mud and her independence sadly compromised. The dictator who, 18 years earlier, had seized the reins of power ostensibly to save the nation has, during the past year, found it expedient to destroy the nation in an attempt to save himself. During that year the labors of Cavour, Mazzini, Garibaldi and the other heroes of the Risorgimento were undone. Before Italian unification an important part of Italy was under the domination of Austria. Now all of Italy is under the domination of an Austrian. Mussolini continues to enjoy the trappings of power. The only real authority in the kingdom is wielded by Hitler.

IN THE YEAR that has elapsed since Mussolini attempted to win an "empire on the cheap," as Winston Churchill so well put it, the world crisis has broadened and deepened. That year has witnessed the spread of the conflict to the Balkans, the Mediterranean, Africa, the Near and Middle East. Forced to fight on a dozen remote fronts while girding their loins for a frontal assault on their home islands, the British have suffered a number of disastrous defeats. But the months since June, 1940, have not been without their moments of triumph for the British. In August and September they successfully countered the attempt of the Luftwaffe to drive the R. A. F. out of the air. Around the turn of the year they routed the Italians in Egypt and Libya. Since then they have smashed the Italian empire in East Africa.

It would be most unwise to exaggerate the importance of these British victories. Some of them have had only a limited value. Others, like Gen. Wavell's brilliant sweep across Cyrenaica, have largely been undone. Yet, by revealing the hollowness of Fascist Italy's military pretensions and forcing Hitler to extend himself, they have not been without their value.

FOR THE ITALIANS the year since June 10 has been a year of almost unmitigated disaster. Their empire is in ruins. They have suffered greater casualties than either the Germans or the British. Even those victories to which Mussolini lays claim—in the Balkans, for instance—are victories which were won not by Italy but by Germany. And Italy now finds herself reduced to the status of a Slovakia, a Bulgaria or any other occupied nation ostensibly allied with the Third Reich.

Nor can the Italians find much comfort in the possibility—declared a certainty by Mussolini and his journalistic mouthpieces—of an Axis victory. In his speech of Tuesday, the Duce spoke anew of Italy's "vital space in the Mediterranean." But the Italians are realistic enough to know that this vital space is still being contested for and that, even should the Axis win, the Mediterranean would be German rather than Italian. The best they can hope for is, in the event of a Hitler triumph, to be allowed a somewhat preferred status as slaves of the Nazis.

WHETHER THEY are actually convinced of the inevitability of an Axis victory is something else again. Mussolini's speech indicates clearly that they are not, despite the recent German victories in Yugoslavia, Greece and Crete.

In that speech the Duce sought to minimize America's actual and potential contribution to the Allied cause while, at the same time, preparing his hard-pressed people for a struggle of far greater duration than either they or he had bargained for.

American help to Great Britain, he said, will come too late. And should the United States enter the war Japan would be loyal to her pact with Germany and Italy. For the Japanese are "a proud and loyal people."

He did not bother to point out that Japan has been at war for four years, that this war has sapped her strength, and that the decision to join Germany and Italy in a conflict against the United States will be made by Japan, not on the basis of the commitments embodied in the tripartite pact, but solely on the basis of Japan's self-interest.

Anyway, the Italian people know little about Japan. They do know a good deal about the United States. And they do not underestimate the might and power of this country. Regardless of the tenor of Mussolini's remarks they will not view with equanimity the prospect that this Nation will to an increasing extent throw its weight into the scales against the totalitarian bloc.

ONE MYTH, the events of the 12 months that have elapsed since June 10, 1940, have smashed beyond rehabilitation. That is the myth that the dictators are riding "the wave of the future." Not all of Mrs. Lindbergh's lyrical prose can hide the fact that, so far as Italy is concerned the "wave of the future" is compounded of all the worst features of the past. Fascism has proved to be only corruption writ large; the principles of the Mafia erected into a system of government; the apotheosis of gangster racketeering of a kind never dreamed by Al Capone in his days of greatest grandeur. Because of that lesson the world is better off for Mussolini's treachery

Capital Opens Drive to Enlist 35,000 for Civilian Defense

By N. E. F. Meekins
Post Staff Writer

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday led the Nation's Capital in the drive to enlist 35,000 volunteers in the District Defense Council's mobilization for civil protection.

Mrs. Roosevelt registered during a luncheon meeting of volunteer workers at the Y. W. C. A. and handed her card to Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of the committee on volunteer service. The First Lady specified that she would volunteer for public relations work. She gave her address as the White House and her phone number as National 1414.

Registration opened in 46 public school buildings at 3:30 p. m. and a force of 500 trained registrars accepted applications. At the Woodrow Wilson High School, Nebraska Avenue and Chesapeake Street, a large crowd was on hand early.

Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the administrator of the Federal Security Agency, and her daughter, Louise, 19, were among the first to register. Mrs. McNutt signed up to be a radio speaker, canteen worker, typist or hostess. She said she can also do quite a bit of knitting. She added:

"I am delighted to be a part of this defense protection drive. I think it is a most splendid thing. I feel more free now to contribute my services to such a cause as my husband probably is not as important as he used to be. I mean by that, that he's not so busy keeping appointments and therefore I have more time of my own."

Mrs. Harold D. Smith, wife of the director of the Bureau of the Budget, also arrived early to register. Mrs. Smith, a native of Indiana, said she has always wanted to drive a tractor but if an opportunity presented itself, she would like nothing better than to drive a tank or an ambulance. She said:

"You know, this is really a toughening up process. The English people went through the same thing and when the Nazi blitz came, they were ready for it!"

Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner of the WPA, was also present.

W. E. Eccard, 60, 323 Rock Creek Church Road, was one of the most enthusiastic applicants. Eccard lost an arm when a youth when a toy cannon exploded during a Fourth of July prank. He said:

"I can drive a car as well as anybody and I'm signing up to be an ambulance driver. And another thing, I can also shoot a gun as straight as the next fellow!"

The Central Bureau at Sixth and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, opened at 1 p. m.—two and a half hours earlier than scheduled, because of the demand to register.

Boy Scouts of Troop No. 47 of the White House Division helped. So did members of the American Women's Service Motor Corps.

One applicant at the central bureau was August Hartman, 1324 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, a grizzled seaman and an eyewitness of a recent Nazi bombing of Liverpool. Hartman said he would serve without pay on any American ship carrying aid to Britain.

Bill Cunningham's Column: Skinny Jehu Drives 759 Miles Non-Stop . . .

By Bill Cunningham

Fort Worth, Tex.—If booting one of those thundering murder buggies around that glorified squirrel cage for 500 miles at Indianapolis is really sport and not a sign of mental incompetence, move over, gents, I've got another. And if there's any quibbler in the hall who wants to rise to point of order, he can rise until he's floating through space.

They'd wired me that a gent would join me from New York and drive the rest of the way with me from St. Louis to Fort Worth. They said he was a nice guy, and with me at the moment, practically anybody was welcome. I'd have even taken Rudolf Hess.

That road is long, and a fellow gets powerful lonesome listening only to the strangled whine of the tires and what passes for the companionship of the radio. And then, from the high tension wires that fringe those rural boulevards comes an occasional 50 miles of peculiarly angry static that sounds like playing a hose of cold water into a vat of hot grease.

A couple of days of that and even the crustiest recluse is panting for companionship. My new companion checked in. He was an efficient looking gent who wore glasses and a brief case with a zipper.

When Someone Else Drives

It just chances that I am one of that vast fraternity who doesn't like to ride when somebody else is driving. I'm not timid, but I just don't like it. I drive fast and hard, but when I've got the wheel I know what I'm doing. I never know whether the other fellow does or not. I've heard it said that pedestrians are divided into two classes, the quick and the dead, but automobilists are likewise separated into the wild and uncurried and those who say firmly, "I'll drive," and mean it.

I thought my new friend flub-dubbed around an awful lot about getting started. He had to see a couple of fellows. He suggested we have luncheon first. He even said it was awfully warm for this time of the year, and how would it be to leave the car in St. Louis and keep the Texas appointment by train or plane? The latter didn't gee with my personal scenario. It was my puddle-jumper and my itinerary didn't bend back that way, and couldn't be so bent without breaking.

At last, we started.

He said, he thought he'd better drive as he was thoroughly familiar with the rather tricky secret of how to get out of the city. He said this so lustily and so eagerly that I thought I'd humor him pro tem, for, after all, I have some business with the man. I thought I'd let him go as far as the city limits anyhow. He couldn't do much but follow suit, thanks to traffic, up to there.

When we reached the outskirts, which along with the bustle, may be why they originally started calling cities the likes of "her" and "she," I subtly suggested that perhaps he'd like to have me take over, that he must be tired with that long trip from New York and all. But he gaily assured me that he never felt better, that he enjoyed driving so much, and had so little chance to do it, and that he'd just keep on unless I really insisted.

Well, I was a little short of insisting, and I'll say this, the guy could drive. He's a slight sort of fellow and he didn't look like any Barney Oldfield over there in the other half of the seat, but he didn't pass on hill. He didn't go climbing up the back of the limousine or the coffee grinder just ahead of him in line. He could drive, all right.

Healthier by the Mile

And to make a long story less that way, he kept driving. Regularly, every hundred miles, or when we stopped for gas or coffee, I'd ask if he weren't tired and suggest that I felt great. But to hear him tell it, he always felt much greater. That just kept going on. The guy kept getting healthier by the mile. He was practically bursting with health by the time we reached Poplar Bluffs.

We'd planned to make Little Rock, about 350 miles, but he said he felt great and why didn't we just keep on? It was just about midnight by then, but I said, "Why, sure." Texarkana was 170 miles or some such, on through the Arkansas night, which was warm and still with a moon that looked like a butter tub chopped in half.

I was punch drunk from just sitting there when we struck the border city, but he said he never felt better and how about going on? Going on where, I wanted to know, for it must have been 3 o'clock by then, and instead of hoping the gentleman would let me drive my own car, I was, by this woozy juncture, afraid he was going to ask me to.

"Why, to Fort Worth," he said, "it's only some 300 miles more."

That made me a little mad, but said I to myself, "I can't let this skinny guy make me quit," and to him, "O. K., Lindbergh. If you can fly it I can sit it." And that's the way it was.

We pulled into Fort Worth around 8 a. m. This amazing gasoline jehu had driven a grand total of 759 miles non-stop in 14 hours. I had sat that one out—every mordant minute of it.

The denouement came when we hauled up to the curb of one of the leading caravan-series of that sizzling metropolis. My boy friend opened the door and almost fell on his nose.

"Now that it's over," he said, practically as if they were his last living words, "I've got a confession to make. I'm terrified of riding in a car when somebody else drives. It makes me frightfully nervous."

The guy had done it in self-defense!

Well, there's my champ, and his record is 759 miles hand-runnin' in one consecutive trick. I hope nobody goes out and tries even to equal it. I don't want sleepy people driving automobiles. This one wasn't sleepy; he was scared. So was I, but he said it first.

For Dress-Up and Sports Occasions

The multicolored Cairo print fabric sandal by I. Miller (above) in a combination of red, yellow, blue, green and white, is practical with many outfits. It looks distinctive with all white, and combines strikingly with green and yellow pastels. At right is the ever popular suede spectator shoe, appearing trim and just a little different with perforations and winged calf toe and heel

Good taste in summer shoes means that a woman dares to be different and dares to be uniform. For individuality, she needs a "special occasion" shoe—one that fits into several different costumes. The Cairo print (left) is an example. But no wardrobe is complete unless it also includes a classic spectator shoe as the one below—well liked because of its young look

National Crisis

"Serious problems are facing the Nation today—and not among the least of these is what to do with discarded corsage pins!"

Dr. DeGoofey

Thus did Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president of the Do Something About It League, electrify her hearers when she gave her annual commencement address yesterday at Spoofem College. Mrs. DeGoofey holds an honorary degree of doctor of reform from this institution.

"Millions of American women," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "daily rack their brains as to what to do with the large and dangerous corsage pins now littering their pin trays. If they throw these pins away they create a menace in the wastebasket. Moreover there is always the chance the pins will be needed in every a new corsage should come without a pin."

Mrs. DeGoofey declared that only the "brains and initiative of youth could solve the problems facing the country.

Ham and Handbags Create Problem

"We oldsters have failed," she said. "Otherwise thousands of women would not be slowly drifting into insanity because handbag manufacturers persist in putting into the bags coin purses on strings that they must be fished out of a mass of debris every time the bags are opened.

"If the older generation had any guts," the crusader continued, "it would not keep on tolerating those people who never have their fares ready when they board street cars or buses. I am also convinced that only youth can figure out a way that a slice of baked ham can be eaten by a buffet supper guest who is standing up holding his plate; or how Nylon stockings can be kept up without the aid of supporters; or how overnight guests can be detoured to hotels, and above all how horsefaced women can be prevented from wearing pompadour hats."

Mrs. DeGoofey came out in support of the Will Hays ban on sweaters and advocated a "licensing system" to regulate the wearing of both sweaters and "little knit dresses." She also urged that something be done about surprise parties on brides, birthday celebrants and other persons who "conceivably might want a little privacy." She termed such parties "Adolescent hangovers from pioneer life and on the par with the charivari."

Louder and Jazzier Sundays Needed

"What we need in this world now," she declared, "are less surprises and more warnings."

Mrs. DeGoofey particularly urged the graduates to devote themselves to solving a pressing national problem—that of creating more noise. "Americans love to make noise," she declared, "and should be encouraged in doing so. Otherwise they may become effete. Now with the gasless Sundays being threatened we must act quickly to alleviate the great Sunday quiet that may develop. Perhaps we could have louder radios, electric fans and radiators. Or perhaps some future Edison may be able to work out a perpetual sounding auto siren or similar device to make our Sundays at home more tolerable and keep our men folk occupied.

"We also need more musical chairs, powder boxes, dressing tables, etc. Whatever we do we must never let this country lose its good old Sunday carnival atmosphere!"

At the conclusion of the exercises, Mrs. DeGoofey was awarded another honorary degree—that of B. A.—Bachelor of Agitation.

More Handwashing In Schools Urged

Mothers of school children who have been deploring the lack of handwashing facilities in the schools their youngsters attend were supported recently by H. H. Linn, who serves as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Columbia University, New York.

"The use of soap for handwashing in schools ought to be expanded," he said, basing his remarks on personal observation and on surveys of school plants. "That goes for towels also. The schools of the country ought to teach cleanliness, and they ought to practice it. The short sighted policy of economy that denies children a chance to wash their hands with soap and warm water and proper provision for drying them, is utterly stupid. In fact, when we consider the value of soap and water as a disinfectant, it is nothing short of criminal. Yet, such a condition is found in some communities."

College Girl Wonders How, Tactfully, to Tell Man She No Longer Loves Him; For Two Years, She Had Honestly Thought and Said That She Cared for Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My best friend has asked me to give her some advice on a matter, and I would appreciate your suggestions. She is 20 years old and a junior in college. For two years she has been going with John, who is now 23. From the beginning until about two months ago they seemed to be very much in love with each other. Then the girl suddenly realized that she doesn't love John—although she had been perfectly honest in thinking and saying she loved him before.

John has finished college and as far as I can learn is only waiting for Jane to finish college before asking her to marry him. She has tried a few times to tell him she no longer loves him. I know John and he is a fine boy. I don't want to see him hurt, either. So what is the easiest way for Jane to explain her feelings to John? WESLEY.

DEAR WESLEY: Since John hasn't asked the girl to marry him; since they have never been formally "engaged," I see no necessity for her to tell him bluntly that she no longer loves him. As a junior in college, she has two more years to go, presumably, before she would be giving serious thought to marriage. And these two years give her ample time in which to taper off her romance with John—if it is, indeed, true that her feeling for him has permanently changed.

It is possible, you know, that if she sent him away now, she might later learn she had made a mistake. And he might be so hurt that the mistake could never be repaired. It may be that she is so sure of his love, at present, that her sense of appreciation of him is dulled. Love isn't always sustained at high pitch. Like the tides, it ebbs and flows. Or, like music, it alternately rises in volume and fades to a whisper, yet the theme of the melody carries on.

The only way your friend can be sure she is managing the situation wisely is to let the element of Time come to her assistance. She can begin to taper off her engagements with John; and this, in itself, will be an indirect admission of waning interest. It will also prompt John—if he is as serious about her as she thinks—to demand an explanation of her behavior. This will give her the opening she wants to broach the subject of her change of heart.

She may say to him, then, that she doesn't know her own mind; that she did once love him very much (or thought she did); but now she's no longer sure what she feels—except that she does know her feeling for him has changed; probably because she herself is growing and changing; certainly not because he has changed or is less worthy of love.

She can tell him what a fine person he is; how hard it is for her to do anything that might hurt him—BUT that she believes it will be best for both if they branch out a little more in different directions hereafter, and learn to depend far less upon each other.

This isn't breaking off the relationship; it is simply giving it another turn; giving it a chance to prove it's real nature in the years to come. It may steady off to a fine friendship; or it may emerge once again into mutual love; or it may fade away into—as the old song goes—"Just a Memory." But that's the way I think she should handle it.

M. H.

Standing on Head Is Aid to Figure

Lady Mendl, Noted For Youth, Chic, Does This Daily

By Ida Jean Kain

THE PROPER way to tell you about Lady Mendl would be to begin "once upon a time there was a little girl so plain, that although her parents loved her just as much, they did occasionally wish she might have been born better looking." You know the ending. The little girl grew up to become celebrated in the great cities of the world for her wit, charm, chic, and good looks.

At these meetings with celebrities, I feel that I am acting as your proxy and try to ask questions which will interest you. Lady Mendl has been cited as one of the internationally best dressed women so often that one of my first questions was: "Do you consider it necessary to have a good figure in order to be well dressed?"

And the quick reply was: "I cannot imagine a well dressed woman who did not possess a good figure." I can assure you that hers is streamlined. She weighs 105 pounds for her height of 5 feet, 4 inches. Since her frame is tiny and she radiates health, that weight does not appear too slight.

Its Advantage After 40

Rather it bears out the scientific theory that after 40 it is an advantage to weigh somewhat less than the standard. When you are with Lady Mendl, it doesn't occur to you to wonder how old she is. The statistics say she is considerably past 40.

She told me, emphatically, that she never diets and that moderation is the whole secret of keeping her weight down. "But," she added, "I do not believe in eating oneself to death four meals a day." Her vitality is evidence of intelligently chosen menus. A favorite luncheon consists of a plain chicken sandwich, made with graham bread, and a glass of milk.

Handsome Lady Mendl (above), well past middle age is a perfect example of how a woman can obtain and retain her good looks through the years. Exercise, careful diet and a keen interest in people are her chief beauty secrets

Is it really true that she makes a habit of standing on her head?

"Of course I stand on my head," she said matter-of-factly, "I can stand on my head as easily as I can stand on my feet. I used to do it as a parlor trick. But I've stopped that"—a mischievous smile—"it isn't dignified for one of my years."

Stands On Her Head Daily

Stand on her head she does, every day, as part of a 20-minute exercise program. She varies her calisthenics but always does a few stretches and two rather strenuous hip slimmers. One is the old upside-down bicycle—weight supported on back of shoulders, hips elevated on hands, one knee drawn down to chest as the other is thrust up in air. The other starts off in about the same position, but legs are kept straight, feet together, and toes touched to floor beyond head, then legs are shuttled back and forth. Her hipline measures a slim 33, with other measurements in proportion.

Practices 20-Minute Exercise Regime; Also Eats Moderately

Obviously one of the chief reasons people like Lady Mendl is that she likes people. Within five minutes after my arrival, about 50 friends also arrived. That doesn't exactly make for a cozy interview! But I did have a chance to ask whether she had had to work for that graceful posture and was told she began as a child to hold herself erect, and that she practiced walking with a book on her head for poise.

Perhaps you would be interested to know what one of the world's best dressed women was wearing that afternoon—a very simply designed black satin frock, with pearls and a clip for ornaments, and wrist length white gloves.

Ralph C. Stanard Weds Miss Nancy Claire Kite

By Hope Ridings Miller

Given in marriage by her uncle, Robert V. Fleming, Miss Nancy Claire Kite yesterday became the bride of Ralph Clarke Stanard at a ceremony of wide interest in Washington's residential circles. St. Alban's Church was the scene of the event, at which the Rev. Dr. Charles Warner officiated at 4:45 p. m. Lillies and white gladioli banked the altar, which was lighted with tall white candles.

To the soft strains of organ music, the wedding party approached the altar where Mr. Stanard and his best man, Wade Lott, of Mobile, Ala., were waiting. The bride was gowned in white Chantilly lace, fashioned with long fitted sleeves, a high neckline accented with a small collar and a full skirt made with a cascade into a fan-shaped train. A fitted bodice, set off with small buttons down the front, was another feature of the lovely frock, and a coronet of matching lace and a long tulle veil further accented the ensemble. The bride's bouquet was of gardenias and stephanotis, tied with a wide satin ribbon.

Miss Vita Krarup, of Washington, was maid of honor, wearing a frock of peach marquisette, styled with a high neckline, full bishop sleeves and a billowing skirt which, like the sleeves, was trimmed in medallions of matching lace. She carried a bouquet of lavendar gladioli and Talisman roses and wore a wreath of the same flowers in her hair.

Elizabeth Lott Is Maid of Honor

Miss Elizabeth Lott, of Mobile, Ala., and Miss Martha Wills Schonfeld, of Washington, were bridesmaids. Their costumes of pale green marquisette were made exactly like that of the maid of honor, and each one carried Picardy gladioli and Johanna Hill roses to match the wreath of flowers in her hair. Small Jeanie Renchard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Renchard, was flower girl. Her floor-length costume of maize marquisette was worn with a matching ruffled hat.

Jack Campbell, Horace Thurber, of Mobile, Ala.; Donald Jahncke, of New Orleans, and Robert W. Fleming, of Washington, were the ushers.

Following the ceremony there was a large reception in the Cordova apartment of the bride's mother, Mrs. Harry Arthur Kite.

Receiving with the wedding party, the hostess wore a softly draped frock of gray lace and chiffon, set off with an orchid corsage and a blue-gray hat and matching shoes.

White gladioli and lilies, interspersed with fern, banked the bay window where the newly wedded couple stood to receive the long line of guests. White roses and gladioli decorated the other rooms of the apartment.

Mrs. Fleming Assists Hostess

Among those who assisted at the reception were Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, who was gowned in black and white figured crepe worn with a white picture hat swathed in a filmy green veil; Mrs. Wright Church in a blue and white ensemble; Mrs. William Renchard, whose French blue and white chiffon frock was worn with a wide-brimmed white hat, trimmed in blue, and Mrs. Daniel Thew Wright, wearing a white silk jersey frock cut on simple lines and set off with a large red hat.

After the last guest was received, the company gathered around the bridal table for the cutting of the wedding cake; and shortly thereafter, the couple left on their wedding trip—destination unrevealed. Traveling, the bride wore a luggage tan and white print frock and coat with tan accessories. She and her husband will make their home in Cambridge, Mass.

The former Miss Kite attended St. Agnes School in Alexandria, and Holton Arms here. Mr. Stanard, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Tuthill Stanard, of Mobile, Ala., studied at George Washington University and Vanderbilt.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Donald Jahncke and Miss Louise Jahncke, of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. George Bailey, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Peter, of Cleveland; Mrs. Byron Freland and Miss Frances Briscoe, of Miami Beach, and Mrs. Edwin Besuden and Dr. and Mrs. Victor Turner, of Newark.

Chaplain Speer Strahan officiated at 4:30 p. m. before an altar decorated with pastel floral bouquets and bouquets of fern.

The bridesmaids, Miss Patricia Hill, Miss Patsy Kelsey and Miss Betty Ann Swagart, wore dresses of a paler shade of blue, fashioned like that of the maid of honor. Their flowers also were yellow roses and blue delphinium.

Hadassah Hears Dr. Eliot Discuss Problems of Defense Communities

By Lucia Giddens

Children in mushroom communities near defense industries and military camps must have better health and educational facilities, if one of today's most urgent welfare problems is to be met, Dr. Martha M. Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau, said yesterday at the annual spring luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah.

Approximately 600 women gathered in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel to hear addresses by Dr. Eliot and Mrs. Robert Szold, of New York, chairman of the national organization's American affairs committee. Of the $1,450 from the ticket sale, half will go to Hadassah's fund for child welfare work in Palestine.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg, retiring president of the Washington chapter, announced that it had made a $100 "inscription" in the Golden Book of the Jewish National Fund in memory of Charles Edward Russell, Washington crusader for human rights, who died recently. This inscription and three others which she announced yesterday will go into the fund for the purchase of land in Palestine. The others were in memory of Mrs. Mayer B. Dodek, Mrs. Bernard S. Merelman and Miss Ida Harmel by groups of their friends.

Dr. Eliot described her recent trip to England to study the program of child care and protection under war conditions. "All England is one great child-placing agency," she said, stressing the effectiveness of volunteers' work in the reception centers for children.

England's advance planning and its survey in 1939 to find available homes for evacuation of children from large centers have been large factors in the success of this program, she said.

Must Not Lose Sight Of Existing Needs

In the United States "we must plan now for more serious emergencies which may or may not arise," Dr. Eliot said. But she warned that "we must not be lured away from doing something about existing needs by worrying about possible future emergencies.

"We need to turn our attention to regular child welfare and health services of the communities, to see that they are made more adequate. Here in Washington there is much to do today, as the result of increased population," she added.

Mrs. Szold told of the child welfare work being carried on in Palestine by the Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America. A nutrition education program is reaching approximately 100,0000 children, the major part of the child population, she said.

The school luncheon project, which is feeding thousands of children, frequently provided the only meal that some had "when the bottom dropped out of the orange business in Palestine," and family incomes declined," she said.

Mrs. Offenberg was presented with a large tray and a Bible in appreciation of her services. Mrs. Harry Leginson, fourth vice president, made the presentation.

Mrs. Breslau Urges Wide Membership Goal

Mrs. Isadore Breslau, who was installed as president, told the members that their goal should be "to enroll every Jewish woman in Washington in Hadassah."

Other new officers installed were Mrs. Samuel Dodek, first vice president; Mrs. Arnold Coplan, second vice president; Mrs. Joseph Freedman, third vice president; Mrs. Levinson, fourth vice president; Mrs. Julius Wolpe, treasurer; Mrs. Aryeh Lev, recording secretary; Mrs. Alexander Hassan, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Philip Heyman, financial secretary; Mrs. Harry Lourie, administrative secretary; Mrs. Aaron Lewittes, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. Simon Hirshman, assistant administrative secretary; Mrs. Benjamin Henkin, assistant financial secretary; Mrs. Fred Gichner and Mrs. Paul Pearlman, trustees.

Several Others On Speaking Program

Others at the speakers' table included Mrs. Walter C. Lowdermilk, wife of the Assistant Chief of the Soil Conservation Service, who on previous Hadassah programs has given impressions gained from her travels in Palestine; Mrs. Herman P. Kopplemann, wife of Representative Kopplemann, of Connecticut; Mrs. Luther Patrick, wife of Representative Patrick, of Alabama; Mrs. E. J. Filtzer, of Baltimore, president of the Seaboard Region of Hadassah, and Mrs. Louise Samuels, recently installed president of Baltimore Chapter of Hadassah.

Evans, parliamentarian.

Mrs. L. E. Murray, a former president, presented the past president's emblem to Mrs. Hancock.

The program opened with the invocation by Mrs. Logan and Mrs. Ruth Stitt led the salute to the flag.

In a skit directed by Mrs. Stitt and Mrs. George W. Evans, members found themselves satirized in club incidents, real and imaginary. Roles were taken by Mrs. D. Edward Clarke, Mrs. Ashburn, Mrs. A. Blondell Howe, Mrs. Charles Robbins, Mrs. L. E. Felton, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Stitt.

Other features included songs by Evelyn Ruth Wagner, with Mrs. Warren Wagner as accompanist; recitations by Mrs. Stitt and songs by Mrs. Robert Miller.

The incoming president asked the members to approach the activities of the coming year with "thoughtful sincerity" as the keynote.

Small sketches of Mexican scenes decorated the colorful souvenir programs and the dessert was served by the light of souvenircandles at each place. Group singing of patriotic songs, led by Mrs. Wagner, concluded the program.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

"I am writing this in my big kitchen, while directing the packing and arranging of baskets of fruits and vegetables. We have had an 'Alert' since early morning, and bombs have been falling near enough to rattle things. However I am as safe in the kitchen as anywhere."

This calm acceptance of danger was written in a recent letter to Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, 1353 Jefferson Street Northwest, by her sister, Mrs. Frederick Carpenter Holland Griffith, whose home, Biddenham Close, is near London. In the letter Mrs. Kasehagen, a member of Monticello Chapter, D. A. R., received word of activities of several D. A. R. friends in war relief work in London.

"Taxes are up again, but no one seems to mind. We must win the war, else what is the good of anything?" Mrs. Griffith wrote.

Mrs. Griffith made little ado about deprivations, but did mention casually that "the rector's wife just came in to bring me an orange, the first I've had since Christmas."

Her gardens are producing fruits and vegetables sufficient for her to send out 100 packages to friends, hospitals and canteens, she said.

Mrs. Griffith attended a luncheon given by the American Chamber of Commerce in London in honor of Ambassador Winant, a week after she went to the American Women's Club luncheon for the Winants. "I am glad I didn't spend the intervening week in London as my friends tried to persuade me to do, as the place where I would have been sleeping got bombed," she said.

At the Sesame Club, a place of assembly for the voluntary workers, "I found Mrs. George Straken, one of our D. A. R. members doing her bit as one of the receivers of the garments," she reported.

"I was thrilled with the layette obtained from the W. V. S. for the little son born to one of my evacuees. The husband is the sailor about whom I told you, who took part in the battle of the Graf Spee and in the rescue work of the Benares survivors. The layette had a woven label, "American Red Cross" and written in indelible ink were the words, "Kent County, Maryland."

29th Division Officers Urge Beer License

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 10.—The State liquor appeals board was urged today by high-ranking officers of the Twenty-ninth Division to grant a Class D beer license to the Blue and Gray Soldiers, Inc., at Odenton, Md.

Evelyn A. Harrison, former student procurement officer at St. John's College, and other club officials appealed their case after the Anne Arundel County Liquor Board refused to grant them a beer license. The county board said the club would be within 1,000 feet of a church, would be in a residential section and would cause a traffic hazard.

The Rev. William Schmeiser, pastor of the Nicholas Memorial and Bethel Methodist Churches at Odenton, led the opponents. Those appearing in behalf of the applicant organization included Lieut. Col. Herbert L. Grymes, Twenty-ninth Division morale officer; Col. Ralph M. Hutchins, 104th Quartermaster regiment commander; Lieut. Col. Graham Bright, the division's inspector general; Lieut. Col. Philip Moison, division military police commander, and Lieut. Col. Edgar T. Fell, of the 175th Infantry.

Harrison said his project had the approval of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Twenty-ninth Division commander, and added he planned to make the club an example for every cantonment in the country.

Col. Grymes said he thought the club would be an excellent thing for soldiers. He added that it had been fully discused by Gen. Reckord and his individual staff.

Frank Bratten, who heard the case with Franklin Purnell, of the appeals board, rulled that the case should be heard on its merits.

Court Dismisses Post-Dispatch Contempt Case

Jefferson City, Mo., June 10 (AP).—The Missouri Supreme Court today dismissed contempt of court citations against the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and two of its staff members in an opinion upholding a newspaper's right to comment upon court decisions.

The late Circuit Judge Thomas J. Rowe in April, 1940, fined the Pulitzer Publishing Co., owner of the Post-Dispatch, $2,000, sentenced Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page, to 20 days in jail and a fine of $200, and Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, cartoonist, to 10 days and $100 fine.

The convictions were based upon two editorials and an editorial cartoon criticizing dismissal in Judge Rowe's court of an extortion charge against former State Representative Edward M. Brady.

Farmer Urges Milk Plan Extension

cost milk, people who can afford to pay the regular market price," he declared.

"As for the genuinely deserving needy, why, it's a good business for the producer to supply their needs. Call it advertising, if you like. And advertising pays."

If, he added, the combination of the farmers' contribution—in the form of reduced prices—and the Federal subsidy on surplus milk sold to reliefers and low-income families proves inadequate to cover all certified needy, then the job of providing for them should be supplemented or taken over by local welfare authorities.

"In any event, the 5-cent milk program should go on," Casey said.

In that regard an encouraging development was reported yesterday. David Miller, in charge of the District's surplus commodity distribution, told The Post 79,055 quarts of 5-cent milk were sold in May—the largest gain since the bottles went on sale here at 11 depots last August.

The May total compares with 69,994 quarts sold in April. At the rate of present purchases, June sales will eclipse last month's, said Miller.

One of the objectives of the milk campaign, which is tied in with nutritional aspects of national home defense, is to increase purchases of the nickel quarts by relief families eligible to buy it, as well as to extend the privilege to those now excluded from its privileges by the rigid eligibility rules.

Miller said that a survey is nearing completion to determine how many of the eligibles are availing themselves of low cost milk and how much they are buying, in relation to the number of small children in the families.

Meantime, O. M. Reed, chief of the dairy division, Surplus Marketing Administration, told The Post that Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, will hear from him "in a few days" on the written request for establishment of a "penny program" in the schools, whereby the District could serve half-pints of milk to at least twice as many children as at present.

Dad No. 1 to Get Night Out With Family

Now that all entries in The Post's Typical Father Contest are in, or on the way in, here's something—

The winner, with his family, will be treated to a gala night out, dinner and theater. The night will be of his own choice.

Washington's No. 1 Dad for a Day will receive, besides, an engraved trophy to be his for always in token of his selection. No need to compete next year for permanent possession.

Who will he be? You'll find out—in Fridays Post—the identity of the man judged to be the closest to fulfillment of what a good, all 'round dad ought to be; whether you call him typical or ideal or model doesn't matter.

Meantime, the nominations continue to roll in, letters from sons, daughters, wives, mothers-in-law, friends—all convinced that the quest for Greater Washington's typical father can end when it reaches their candidate.

Excerpts from a portion of yesterday's mail:

"Last summer, while we were living in La Porte, Ind., my dad encouraged me and talked me into entering a bathing beauty contest. After work he would take me to the beach daily to get a suntan.

"He stayed close by so that I would not be in the sun too long. With his hopes and encouragement behind me, I entered the contest and won the title of 'Miss La Porte.' Gosh, did he swell up!'

Lenore T' beats the drum for her entry because "but for my father I would not have this nice home (in Chevy Chase), pretty clothes and an entree to the country club where I can enjoy tennis and swimming."

When 14-year-old Edward Harding, of Rockville, Md., takes pencil in hand, it is in behalf of "a typical dad because he is good to us all. He is a carpenter and has to work every day to get along and we don't have the money to go on long trips or take any vacations but he is crazy about fishing and he always takes me fishing on Saturdays and some times on Sundays."

A little girl named Sylvia, who lives in Arlington, Va., lists her daddy's virtues numerically. Like this:

1. He's a captain in the Army.
2. He can ride a bicycle backward.
3. He made us a sandbox, swing, slide, wading pool, swingbar and two pairs of stilts.

And so on to No. 13, the last, which reads: "He is so smart that he could take the back of a clock off, look inside and know what everything is."

Sylvia's dad might blush after all that build-up—but he'd be proud.

Rail Workers Formally Demand Wage Increases

Chicago, June 10 (AP).—Representatives of 1,150,000 organized railroad workers formally demanded wage increases of the carrier managements today.

The general chairman of each union notified each railroad with which his group has an agreement of the union's decision to open existing agreements "for the purpose of making such changes in wages as may be necessary" to provide for the higher scales asked, and to make "such changes" effective July 10.

An indication of management reaction came last week when the Western Association of Railway Executives described the demands as "unreasonable" and said "there is nothing . . . to justify the wage demands with which the railroads are now confronted."

The unions' formal demands will be followed within 30 days by conferences between spokesmen for railroads and unions.

People who wear plates or bridges often suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing may not prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing that definitely stops "denture breath" is daily use of Polident! This new brushless cleaner has won the approval of thousands of dentists and users. Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and food deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 30¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if not delighted.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Do this daily: Add a little Polident powder to ½ glass water. Stir. Then put in plate or bridge for 10 to 15 minutes —as Rinse—and it's ready to use!

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Dept. Vacations Limited to 2 Weeks

War Department has limited its employes to two weeks' vacation this year by formal order. An employe is entitled to 26 days vacation, which is the equivalent of nearly four weeks. The War order, however, is elastic. It wont' prevent employes from taking leave where health is involved and in other exceptional cases. The order also won't affect employes who will have to forfeit leave at the end of the year. An employe may carry over only 60 days of leave from one year to the next.

Other agencies also will restrict vacations as a matter of policy. Officials in agencies such as Navy, State, Maritime, Civil Service, OPM, OEM, CAA among others have been advised not to restrict vacations by a formal order. Most of these agencies and many more bureaus that are working on the defense effort will limit vacations to two weeks. Persons in key positions will be lucky to get two weeks off.

War probably will be the only department to lengthen working hours by formal order, unless the war crisis grows more acute. Employes in other departments and agencies will be compelled to work overtime but it won't be on a rigid basis such as the 44-hour workweek ordered by Secretary Stimson. Navy is certain to lengthen hours but it's doubted whether it'll be done on order of Secretary Knox. The War orders to curtail vacations and to lengthen working hours were necessary, it's said, because the department is so decentralized here in Washington. It has offices in more than 25 different buildings which makes, of course, for loose organization.

Out for Legal Talent

President Roosevelt yesterday appointed a Board of Legal Examiners to recruit legal talent for the Federal Government and to set up the machinery for bringing attorneys under a merit system. Solicitor General Francis Biddle was appointed chairman as predicted in this column. The five members representing executive agencies are Clifford Durr, assistant general counsel of RFC, who is a brother-in-law of Supreme Court Justice Black; Charles Fahy, assistant solicitor general; Edward Foley, Treasury general counsel; Abe Fortas, director of Interior's Power Division, and Gerald D. Reilly, Labor Department solicitor.

From the teaching profession the President appointed Paul Hays, Columbia Law School professor, and Maurice T. Van Hecke, dean of the University of North Carolina Law School. Private attorneys on the board are Marion Smith, of Atlanta, and Philip J. Wickser, of Buffalo. Most of the appointees are from prominent law schools. It seems strange that the President didn't appoint the general counsel from either ICC, Veterans, or Federal Security, all of whom have been working directly with Civil Service and have had experience in recruiting attorneys under the merit system.

Civil Service Commission has interpreted the President's order of May 27, which will prohibit Federal employes from being certified to other Federal jobs and which will prevent employes from participating in merit tests unless they get approval from their superiors. The commission decided the order will apply to nearly all Federal employes, whether classified or unclassified. The single exception is temporary employes.

Any Federal employe may apply for a civil service test, the commission has ruled, but the commission won't grade the paper of any participant who already has a Federal job unless that person gets approval from the agency where he is employed. Approval must be signed by an "appropriate official."

The Army Recruiting Service has requested Federal employes to use the expression "Keep 'Em Flying" instead of "Down the Hatch" before taking a drink . . . Dean Edwin Dickinson, of the University of California Law School, has been appointed consultant on international law at Justice . . . Another instructor, Dr. Ralph W. Phillips, of Utah State Agricultural College, has been appointed to make animal-genetics investigations at the Beltsville Research Center.

President Asks New Crossings Of Potomac

President Roosevelt yesterday called on Congress to expedite proposals for breaking traffic bottlenecks in Washington by constructing new "crossings" of the Potomac and Anacostia rivers.

The request was contained in recommendations for a $525,000 increase in the 1942 District appropriation bill, now scheduled to be rushed through the House Friday.

Prepared by Acting Budget Director John B. Blanford and submitted by Mr. Roosevelt to Speaker Bankhead, the recommendations proposed that all but $50,000 of the increase be spent to meet inadequacies of the 1942 District highway program as carried in original budget estimates.

High Points of Program

The principal recommendations were:

1. That Congress direct the District Commissioners to confer with officials of the Public Roads Administration, Virginia and Alexandria on the "desirability and practicability" of constructing a "vehicular crossing"—tunnel or bridge—of the Potomac from the "general vicinity" of Alexandria and U. S. Route No. 1 to Shepherd's Landing, Blue Plains, D. C.

2. That the 1942 supply bill carry $100,000 for plans and acquisition of land for approach roadways for a "vehicular crossing" of the Anacostia from the "general vicinity" of South Capitol and P Streets to the proposed Anacostia Parkway at the northern end of the Naval Air Station.

3. That $100,000 be spent for construction of pedestrian islands at various streets and for changes in the layout of roadways and curb lines.

4. That appropriations for surfacing new streets and resurfacing old ones be increased $250,000.

5. That an item in the District budget for beginning construction of the proposed grade separation at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest be increased from $250,000 to $300,000.

Action Is Informal

The proposed increases in the highway budget were laid "informally" before the District Appropriations Subcommittee by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, during hearings on the appropriation bill last week, Representative George H. Mahon, subcommittee chairman, said last night.

He added that the proposals already have been considered by the subcommittee and decision reached on which of them to include in the bill. Details of District expenditures for the fiscal year beginning July 1 will not be known until the more than $55,000,000 measure is reported to the House.

House leaders decided yesterday to postpone consideration of the bill from tomorrow to Friday due to the prospect for prolonged debate over the WPA appropriation. Mahon said he is confident the District bill will pass the House in a single session.

In the President's recommendations to the House, it was urged that the Commissioners be asked to report results of conferences with Virginia and Federal officials over the river crossing "at the earliest practical date." The White House letter reached the Capitol as the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee disiributed printed transcripts of its public hearings on a bill introduced by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, proposing studies of a combination bridge and tunnels crossing the Potomac.

Representative Lanham, the committee chairman, said further consideration of the bill would be delayed while the body clears its calendar of other legislation. Lanham added that he understood another Potomac bridge bill was being prepared.

In the supplemental estimates from the President, appropriation of $50,000 was proposed to enable the Commissioners to enforce the law requiring erection of fire escapes on certain District buildings.

Rabbis of Washington synagogues last night joined with lay members of the new Agudath Achim Congregation in feting and installing Rabbi Herman J. Waldman, their first spiritual leader. The dinner took place at Beth Sholom Synagogue, Eighth and Shepherd Streets Northwest.

Leading the greetings, Rabbi Henry Segal urged the young congregation to stand by the new leader, who, he said, had the duty of "holding the light for others to see the way." He is spiritual leader of B'nai Israel Congregation.

Rabbi Harry Silverstone, of Tifereth Israel Congregation, gave the installation prayer, and earlier heard himself praised by Toastmaster Irving Summers because he graduated from the Washington College of Law tomorrow night. Rabbi Silverstone is said to be an authority on the Jewish law.

Tributes also came to Rabbi Waldman from Aaron Twersky, secretary of the Rabbinical Association of the United States, and others.

In his introductory remarks the toastmaster lauded Rabbi Waldman; President Jacob Reifkind and other officers of the new congregation, which is temporarily worshiping at 909 Quackenbos Street Northwest.

Among others participating were Rabbi Julius Loeb, retired spiritual leader of the Southeast Hebrew Congregation; Rabbi M. H. Levinson, of Bethe Sholem; Rabbi Zemach Green, Ohov Sholem; Rabbi Solomon H. Metz, Adas Israel, and Rabbi Jacob Dubrow, of Kesher Israel. Milton Davis handled arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Teplitz, among the first members of the new congregation, were congratulated at the dinner on their thirty-first wedding anniversary. Mr. Twersky and his fiancee, Miss Mildred Baron, also were felicitated on their coming wedding.

Bill to Set Up Citizen Control Of Recreation

Legislation to put all recreation facilities in the District in the hands of a citizen-dominated board was being drafted last night for the District Recreation Subcommittee.

Broad outlines of a bill to effect sweeping changes in recreation administration were agreed upon yesterday in an executive subcommittee session at the Capitol that culminated weeks of public hearings.

The subcommittee, meeting with Chairman John F. Hunter, decided to discard two bills on which hearings have been held and write a new bill. The new measure, however, would embody many features of a bill submitted after years of study by the President's Recreation Committee, which had the support of the Board of Education, the District Commissioners and many civic organizations.

Seven-Member Board

In its most drastic revision of the President's bill, the subcommittee decided to confine Federal representation on the recreation board to the Office of National Capital Parks. The President's bill would have included a representative of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission on the board.

The subcommittee also agreed that the board should be one of seven members, rather than nine, as originally proposed. Four members of the board would be citizens of five years' residence in the Capital who would be named by the commissioners. Two other board members would represent the Board of Education and the commissioners.

The board would be empowered to name a superintendent of recreation who would be charged with full responsibility for formulating and carrying out District recreation programs, covering use of playgrounds, recreation areas, community center activities and play facilities in the parks.

$6,000 for Superintendent

The superintendent would be named on a year-to-year basis and his salary could not exceed $6,000, the subcommittee decided. To get the best recreation director available, the subcommittee agreed that he should be selected from the country at large. He would be given authority, it was decided, to employ and discharged assistants.

If at the end of each year's service, the board should decide to discharge the superintendent, it would be required to give him 60 days' notice.

The draft of the bill will be considered at a subcommittee meeting at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Attending yesterday's meeting in addition to Hunter were Representatives Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin; Stratton (Republican), of Illinois; Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, and Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

Howard Perry Mace and Elsie Mae Carper received the Omicron Delta Kappa and Pi Beta Phi Awards for the most constructive in students' activities.

Girl Sought in $100 Theft From Congressman's Aid

Police broadcast a lookout last night for an attractive girl about 20 suspected to stealing $100 from a secretary's desk in the office of Representative James J. Heffernan (Democrat), of New York.

Miss Catherine Judge, 3333 Tennyson Street Northwest, told police she was taking dictation in Representative Heffernan's office when she heard a noise in the reception room. When she went to see who was there, the young woman was leaning over her desk, she said, and inquired for Representative Snyder.

Miss Judge said she missed the money from her purse about five minutes later.

48 Graduates Are Told Value Of Learning in a 'Lost' World

Forty-eight senior students at Immaculate Conception High School received diplomas in graduation exercises last night and assurances their schooling would stand them in good stead in a world "that has lost its way."

After the girls had received their parchments from the Rev. John K. Cartwright, D. D., in Hurney Hall, Eighth and N Streets Northwest, the Rev. John Tracy Ellis, Ph.D., of Catholic University, declared in an address to graduates:

"You young ladies step forth tonight into a world that has lost its way; you become part of a generation of men who no longer feel confidence in the future . . . and yet there is a profound difference between you and those who have not had your good fortune to be trained in a way of life which places first things first, in a philosophy which gives first place to God."

The Rev. Cartwright presented special awards to graduates as follows: For general excellence, Catherine Lois Mayhew, a summa cum laude graduate of the academy; the John W. and Ellen A. Fraber Award for secretarial studies, Mary Pauline Rollman; Mrs. Marie Scalessa Memorial Award for English, Miss Mayhew.

Those receiving diplomas were:

Craig L. Smith Quits the Force To Join Air Corps

Traffic Sergt. Craig L. Smith, who has been a police escort for probably as many celebrities as any other man on the force, disclosed last night that he had resigned to enlist in the Army Air Corps.

SGT. SMITH

He was a sergeant in the Air Corps 15 years ago before joining the police force. Before receiving a police sergeantcy last August, he served as a motorcycle escort to hundreds of celebrities, including the King and Queen of England and numerous movie stars.

Sergt. Smith, who lives at 2800 Twenty-sixth Street Northwest with his wife and three children, said he would report for duty at Bolling Field July 5. His resignation from the force was effective last midnight.

Connecticut Ave. Group Opposes Circle Underpass

The Connecticut Avenue Association has sent a letter of protest against the proposed underpass at Dupont Circle to the District Commissioners, it was announced at a meeting of the association last night at the Mayflofiwer Hotel.

In the letter, the association said it realized that traffic control is needed to speed up traffic. However, it continued, it must be noted that there has not been a fatal traffic accident at the circle and a proportionately small number of traffic accidents. The letter added that a subway is certain to destroy the value of commercial property with a resultant loss in taxes.

The association voted that a committee go before the director of traffic and agree to any reasonable arrangement of vehicular traffic that will permit placing the Chevy Chase buses back on their old route on Connecticut Avenue.

Inquest Seeks Cause of 37th Traffic Death

D. C. traffic toll this year 37
Deaths this date last year ... 29
District total last year 79

While District traffic authorities yesterday completed plans for an inquest into the thirty-seventh traffic death this year, a 77-year-old woman was injured critically by a taxicab.

The coroner's hearing will be held in the death of Vernon Pheifer, colored, 13, of 435 Q Street Northwest, who died at Freedmen's Hospital yesterday of a fractured skull. He was knocked down by an automobile at Third and N Streets Northwest, June 1.

Police charged the driver of the automobile which struck the boy—Arthur Cooper, 22, of 2523 Fourteenth Street Northwest—with reckless driving. He will appear at the inquest this morning.

Charges of reckless driving and bad brakes were placed against Charles O. Hadenfelt, 61, of 1434 Fairmont Street Northwest, after his car struck Mrs. Wilhelmina Weitzel, 77, of 1343 Monroe Street Northwest, yesterday.

Police said the aged woman was knocked down as she stepped from a street car loading platform, at Fourteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, by Hadenfelt's taxicab which was traveling to the left of the platform.

Mrs. Weitzel was taken to Emergency Hospital where doctors said both her arms and left leg were broken and that she suffered a possible fractured skull. Her condition was said to be critical.

80 Lottery Winners in D. C. Get Prized Parking Space

Washington held a legal lottery yesterday and the winners were awarded the most coveted of city prizes—a place to park their automobiles.

There were 80 winners, all of whom had applied for parking spaces at the new Municipal Center Building on Indiana Avenue Northwest. Of a total of 216 available spaces—104 underground and 32 outside—the District was forced to give up half to the War Department.

Drawings for the remaining 208 were held in the office of E. P. Brooke, superintendent of the District Building. He said the War Department would make its own assignments.

Brooke emphasized that the drawings were held for private car spaces. Official District cars, he said, already are taken care of. The balance of spaces will be assigned—by lottery—as soon as requests are received, Brooke added.

The lucky parkers will pay $3 a month for underground space and $2 for outside. Those drawn yesterday will be given a choice.

The first name drawn from the lottery bowl by Mrs. Dorothy K. Martin, a secretary in the office of Geoffrey Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, was Detective Sergt. Robert J. Maghan of the Police Department.

Brooke, himself, drew a reserved space, but declined to say whether he would take inside or out. Among other fortunate parkers was Ira N. Gullecksen, official police photographer; Edward Towers, chief clerk of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic and Lieut. George Darnell, head of the police homicide squad.

One newspaperman, John T. Burch, of the Daily News, also was on the list.

Most requests, Brooke pointed out, came from the Police Department.

"HUT SUT" NOT SWEDISH. With the "Hut Sut Song" ringing from early morn to early morn over the radio and in night spots, young Maestro Dick Koons, of the Mayflower Lounge steps forward to say its lyrical assertion of Swedish origin is strictly the malarkey.

"Those screwy 'Hut Sut' lyrics are just good old fashioned, American double-talk," says Dick. "They make no sense whatsoever except for the wonderful sense that we have another 'Music Goes Down and Around' on our hands. Every time we play it people crowd about the bandstand and holler 'What goes on?' and 'What's it all about?' It's that kind of public interest that makes a hit a hit."

In its 7-week life the "Hut Sut Song" has sold 150,000 copies, broken into the Hit Parade and is just getting started. We wish we knew a Swede so that we could check on Dick's assertion of its non-Swedishness. Or is there such a thing as Swedish double-talk?

WOODS AND BRAY, dancing stars of the Shoreham Terrace

It's and all-hit floor show in the Metronome Room this week. Jack Coffey and his bright boys and girls have whipped up a melange of their most successful numbers since arriving here. It's their goodbye gift to a Washington that has heartily enjoyed them and wishes them well.

NEPTUNE NOTES. When Bob and Bertie Heilman leave the Neptune Room next Friday midnight they'll go straight to Buffalo's Hotel Stuyvesant where they'll play alternately with Don Carper's Four, recently seen here in Cafe Caprice . . . Joe Collins and his Mad Hatters expect to stay around Brooklyn for a few days while Joe talks things over with the draft board and finds out whether he's goin to be a musician or a buck private next month . . . That big party the other eve was for Miss Alga de Lisa, assistant manager, and her twin sister, Mrs. Alma Hodge . . . Visitors from all over the country ask Joe Collins for special music, but his eyes popped recently when a request card for "One Alone" came from Miss D'Arlene Cranston of faraway Chalonaux, France.

FABULOUS FARM. An acre or so of ground goes with the new Virginia home of Conrad Siebold, part owner of Restaurant "222." Pressed for details of his gardening, Conrad allowed as how he plans to raise some potato chip vines and pretzel bushes.

A BOY TEAM AND GIRL TEAM contest for honors in the new Lotus show. Kollette and Deane, a pair of agile blondes, do an adagio number of a difficult type usually never attempted by girls. Pedro and Rafael, typical young Cubans, accent their acrobatics with some lively maraca shaking. Climax of the act comes when Pedro stands on his head on top of Rafael's head, and the pair stroll about, sit down and drink a glass of wine.

An all-girl musical unit may soon open in the Carlton cocktail lounge. Diversionist Hal Yates has just left the Carlton for a summer engagement on Long Island.

PREFERRED TUNEFACE. "Not So Long Ago," as tenored by the Pall Mall Room's Russ Cullen whose voice and direction are equally fine. Every word in a Cullen song is clear and understandable . . . Remember "My Reverie?" It's being brought back with pristine luster by the Mayfair's Chordsmen, all masters of every smoothie trick in modern harmony singing . . . "Hi Cy! What's a Cookin'?" inspired by the "Pot o' Gold" movie, is a hot rhythm pot o' gold as simmered up by Paul Kain's Glen Echo band . . . The bird call novelty violined by the Plymouth's Michel. It's refreshing as a tall and tinkling beverage . . . Also so-pleasant is "In Old Hawaii" as done by Hi Hat's Carmela, especially if she's wearing that tropical print that looks like a grown-up sarong.

STARLIGHT ROOF BECKONS. Now that the rainy spell has been broken, the Starlight Roof looms as an ultra-charming place to spend the evening. Dick Wilson's dance music is glossy and Lady Vine, singing mistress of ceremonies and hostess, keeps the ball rolling gayly.

SHORT SHORT STORIES. Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, was the thirteenth child in a family of 13. We understand her parents said, "Well, now that we've achieved perfection—" . . . Valentina, Madrillion's new singer, has been in the United States for only seven months, has an awfully pretty Cuban accent . . . Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, should be nicknamed "How 'bout that?" He uses the phrase 50 times a day . . . Because bloodie Eve Knight has been so smart about learning Spanish songs she's now billed as the "Lush Latin" on the luscious blue folders issued by the King Cole Room . . . If you can find any better rare roast beef than that served by the Casino Royal—we'll eat it . . . The Lounge Riviera has started off its summer season with a couple of weeks of record cracking business . . . The violin-piano combination of Evelyn Scott and Texas at Ciro's Famous Village started because they're both members of the musical sorority, Mu Phi Epsilon . . . Helen Malcolm's recent return to the Silver Fox is a bona fide case of "popular request." So many folks missed her so much.

A quiet oasis in the downtown hurly-burly is the Harrington Tavern. Soft-stepping waiters and tall icy juleps. No music though you can turn on the radio to hear the ball games.

ROMANTIC DRIVES. River Bend. Just keep right down the Mount Vernon Boulevard (and never mind those parking planets) and you'll arrive at River Bend, the home of "Piggy Parties," "Harvest Nights," oversized chicken dinners and George Stein's hotcha dance music. You'll have a good time.

Nightingale. Expert musicians and amateurs in rhythm are alike in vowing that Rodd Raffell's Band turns out the last word in streamlined dance music. You'll find the vine draped 'Gale just a few miles below Alexandria, and crowded with hundreds of Raffell fans.

Kavakos Grill. It's not a romantic drive to Kavakos, though it's quite a way over northeast. The romance comes in after you get there. Jolly oldtime country dances a couple of times a week. Also plenty of 1941 stepping to Vincent Rose's music.

Nats the Goat as Bob Feller Wins 13th of Year

Hartley Okays Ring Body's Salary Bill

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, June 10.—Eight days hence, Billy Conn will step into a New York ring that will also contain Joe Louis, and try to give the champion of the world 20 pounds and lick him. If Conn wins, it would certainly be the neatest trick of the week.

POVICH

As the fight nears, Challenger Conn is commanding more respect, and it was ever thus in the days preceding a big fight. The din-din of ballywood and the willingness to lend credulity to the possibilities of an upset is always present, and the Conn who wasn't conceded anything more than a remote chance to beat Louis when the articles were signed, is now no more than a 4-to-1 shot.

We don't think Conn will win, which is no statement to cause anybody to hock the family gems and get a bet down on Louis; not with our opinion on such matters retailing at 3 cents home delivered or at your nearest newsstand. But we are trying to be objective about it all, and there seems little to recommend Conn aside from a native cleverness inside the ring, plus what must be a gamester's heart.

Conn's chances were supposedly improved after the Louis-Buddy Baer fight in Washington when the clumsy, slow-moving Baer tagged the champion with a left hand and knocked him through the ropes, but we can not conceive of such as Conn knocking Louis down. Baer, for all his ponderous slowness, carried power in his fists, and Conn has never been rated as a puncher.

Three of the four men who have had Louis on the floor have been fine punchers—Baer, Tony Galento and Max Schmeling. The only other fellow to put Louis down was Jimmy Braddock, who still says proudly that the uppercut with which he floored Louis at Chicago was the best punch he ever threw in his life. There is nothing in Conn's arsenal that figures to hurt Louis, only embarrass him.

Conn appears to be just the sort of opponent to bring out the best in Louis. Heretofore, the champion, risking a title valued at more than a million dollars, had to be wary against most of the mugs he was fighting; he could scarcely afford to be hit by inept but strong-arm guys who might land on his chin and upset him.

But against Conn, Louis should be very willing to take what the challenger throws his way. For the first time in a long while, the champion is meeting an opponent who doesn't outweigh him. He will have a 20-pound advantage on Conn, and the challenger, after all, is merely an overstuffed light-heavyweight who never made a reputation as a puncher even when he was the class of his own division.

They've built Conn up to this thing. With the Louis fight in view, they have put 10 additional pounds on the challenger. What Conn may have sacrificed in speed and endurance by those added 20 pounds is debatable. He may be hitting harder, But the chances are he has lost some of his speed. That may be completely fatal against such as Louis.

There has been claims, of course, that Louis has receded from the fine edge he attained when he won the title from Jimmy Braddock four years ago and defended it so successfully against Max Schmeling, the man who once upon a time knocked him out. But the blunt fact is that Louis, at his present 202 pounds is only three-quarters of a pound heavier than on the night when he won the title. There seems to be small basis there for any belief that the champion has become fleshy.

In the general appraisal of Conn as a clever, fast smart boxer, the fact that appears to be overlooked is that Louis himself is no dolt in that ring. There is nothing wrong, whatsoever, with Louis' own boxing skill, and we will always believe that he punches faster than any heavyweight who ever lived.

Conn may discover that Louis, even as a heavyweight, punches with more speed than most light-heavies and middleweights he has been meeting. Louis carries his fists high on his breast for a purpose; he knows with those short, fast punches he is till a dangerous socker. If he tags Conn on the chin, Conn will not be tagged by one of his light-heavyweight opponents, he will have been hit by a guy who can rock.

The unanimous opinion is that Conn can take it, but so could Buddy Baer. He took it magnificently for five rounds, but there had to be an end to human resistance, and Louis eventually knocked him out. We think that sometime during the evening, Louis will catch up with Conn at some point, and knock him out, too, perhaps with one punch.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Fort Worth, June 10.—Tris Speaker, the baseball immortal who has been serving on a draft board in Cleveland, hasn't any doubt about what he'll do if, by some curious coincidence, Bobby Feller appears before him as a prospective draftee.

CONSIDINE

"I'd probably be criticized," said Speaker who was down here mixing a little golfing pleasure with his job of representing a steel firm, "but if Feller came up before me late in August, I'd give him 60 days to wind up his business affairs before ordering his induction.

"A lot of persons would say I was favoring the kid. And the kid himself might even come in for some criticism as unjust as that terrible stuff thrown back at Hank Greenberg, when Hank was out in Honolulu unable to speak for himself. But a 60-day deferment would be perfectly legal in Bobby's case, and I think a majority of the people in this country would agree that I was being fair.

"As a member of the draft board, I've given dozens of men and boys 60 days deferment in which to wind up their business affairs. Feller's 'business' is pitching. There would be no way he could adequately wind up that business until the end of the World Series, for I think, barring accident and given the breaks which any great performer needs, this is the year Bobby's going to win 30 games and put Cleveland in the series.

"I don't believe in special privileges for any man in the draft age. Neither does Feller. But I think also that a good athlete should get all that's coming to him, just as Joe Doakes does. Feller would be just as entitled to finish out the last weeks of the baseball season as a farm boy is given time to gather in his crops before we send him away for a year."

Speaker thinks that baseball missed a good bet at the time the draft started by not sending Judge Landis or a representative body of owners to the War Department for the purpose of striking a deal. "I think if the representatives of the big leagues would have said to the draft authorities, 'let us have all of our players until October, then we will turn 400 perfectly conditioned men over to you. We'll give you our married men as well as our single men, and you won't have to waste time getting them in shape. They'll be ready. We ask only one other thing. Give them back to us on April 1, for the morale of the country at large, and we promise to return them in good shape the following October for six more months.'"

Watching the U. S. Open amounted to old home week for Tris. He still has a home at Hubbard, Tex., where he was born and where he commenced the baseball career which led to the hall of fame and to a perpetual place in the perfect outfield of Cobb, Himself and Ruth. Hubbard has a population of 1,800 when every one is home, and good, gray, dapper Tris is mighty proud of the town.

Mention of Hubbard the other day, while we were following one of the Open maches, reminded Tris of his early struggles in baseball. He told us he thought he was all set for the big leagues in 1907 when Houston sold him to the Red Sox for $750.

He played a few games for the Sox and played well, but the following spring they didn't send him a contract. He went dejectedly to Marlin, Tex., and asked John McGraw for a job, but McGraw put his arm around him, pointed to the Giant outfielders and said, "Boy, can't you see I've got too much money already tied up in outfielders." After that, Tris wired the management of the Washington Senators and the Pirates. Neither answered his wire—two historic oversights.

Boston finally gave him to Little Rock, agreeing to pay Little Rock $500 if it took him back. By midseason, Tris was leading the league by such a huge margin that the Pirates offered Little Rock $10,000; Tris a $5,000 bonus for signing, and a three-year contract at $5,000 a year to join the Pirates. But, to his horror, Little Rock kept its oral bargain with the Red Sox, made Tris stay, and turned him over to the Sox near the end of the season for the $500.

Tris, who is a fine golfer, hoped to be invited by the P. G. A. to appear with Cobb and Ruth when they play their two golf exhibitions for the Red Cross. He will challenge the winner.

Fireworks On D.C. Fight Front Seen

Rep. Carter to Confer With Trust-Buster On Inquiry; Hartley To Push Ring Bill

By Al Hailey

The course of events moved swiftly along the Capital's boxing front yesterday with two developments that are expected to set off a spectacular display of verbal fireworks in the near future.

The developments:

1. Representative Fred Hartley (Republican), of New Jersey, agreed to become the House sponsor for the District Boxing Commission bill asking for salaries of $3,000 per year for two of its members, and,

2. Representative Albert E. Carter, of California, revealed his intentions to confer with the Department of Justice's trust-buster, Thurman Arnold, in reference to a proposed Congressional investigation of professional boxing on a national scale.

Hartley met early in the day with members of the three-man boxing body and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to go over a rough draft of the new salary measure and said he could find nothing objectionable in it.

Plan to Rush Bill

The commission promptly announced that Keech would whip the bill into shape immediately for presentation to the House.

The salary item in the four-point measure already has aroused considerable comment in boxing circles. Members of the ring commission—whose intermittent meetings in the past have been fruitless gatherings that have resulted in more or less negative action—have never received pay for their service to the community heretofore.

One school of thought has it that if the two nonpolice department members of the commission are going to demand pay, compensation also should be provided for lower boxing officials—such as judges and timekeepers, not any of whom are now paid.

Second Development

The second development yesterday—the proposed Congressional investigation of so-called boxing monopolies—has been brewing on Capitol Hill since Referee Arthur Donovan's decision in the recent case of Joe Louis versus Buddy Baer.

Donovan's ruling that Louis' after-the-bell punch that flattened Baer came at the sound of the bell and his subsequent disqualification of Baer set off the move.

Carter, of Oakland, Calif., lent his support to Hartley and Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, in obtaining passage of the bill legalizing boxing in the District of Columbia in 1933. Carter has taken a major part in the plan to call for a sweeping inquiry into the fight game.

No Dead Issue

"As soon as time permits, I plan to confer with Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold. I am going to give him some information I have in order to see if, in his opinion, there is anything that can be done to correct the present boxing evil," Carter said.

Carter said that he has been tied up on other legislative matters on the Hill and hasn't had time to go into the boxing matter fully as yet.

"But it is by no means a dead issue," he insisted.

Maybe Warneke Should Have Had a Convoy on Trip Home

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Ducking his head and covering up, the Cardinals' Pitcher Lon Warneke is the acme of caution as he crosses home plate safely after coming around from first on Jim Brown's double to leftfield in the third inning of yesterday's game with the Phils. Lon pitched one-hit ball for a 3-0 St. Louis victory. Catcher Ben Warren has just received the toss which caused Lon to cringe

Board Defers Rigney; State Chief Protests

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 10.—Johnny Rigney, 26-year-old Chicago White Sox pitcher, who was scheduled to enter Army training June 20, has been granted a 60-day deferment at his own request.

Rigney's local draft board revealed today that the big pitcher asked June 3 to be deferred on the grounds that he would "suffer individual hardship" if forced to enter the service at this time. Rigney pointed out that he would lose almost half of his annual salary and a chance to earn more under a bonus clause in his contract.

Paul G. Armstrong, State director of the selective service, however, moved quickly to block the deferment of the pitcher, revealing that he had appealed the board's action to Washington authorities.

"I am personally a great White Sox fan and a real admirer of Rigney," Armstrong said. "However, regardless of my personal feelings I am bound to carry out my duties as prescribed by law and laid down by my superiors."

A draft board statement declared the fact that Rigney "is in the public eye did not influence our judgment or final decision," and added:

"While we appreciate that there will probably be some criticism of selective service in granting this deferment, there also would be some unfavorable comment if it were not granted."

Warneke Stars, Cards Win; Dodgers Score

Hurler Limits Phils To 1 Hit in Taking 3-to-0 Victory

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 10.—Lon Warneke had his stuff today and the veteran righthander turned in a brilliant one-hit pitching performance as the first place St. Louis Cardinals shut out the Phillies, 3 to 0.

Little Emmett Mueller, the first man to face Warneke, slammed a line drive single to right field. He reached second on Joe Marty's sacrifice, but thereafter Warneke took command, permitting only three other Phils to reach first, all on walks, and retiring the last 18 men in order.

It was the third one-hit game at Shibe Park in a week. Last Tuesday Tommy Hughes blanked the Chicago Cubs with one hit for the Phils. Johnny Vander Meer, of Cincinnati, turned the trick against the Phils Friday night.

Warneke Fans Six

Warneke's slider was working to perfection. His fast ball had a hop on it and his curve broke so sharp that he fanned six on called third strikes. "Everything I threw went where I wanted," he remarked in the clubhouse afterward.

After Mueller reached second in the first inning, Warneke walked Nick Etten, but got Danny Litwhiler to pop out to end the threat. Marty walked in the third, but was caught attempting to steay. Johny Rizzo

Fitzsimmons Halts Pirates, 4-3; Vaughn Hits 3-Run Homer

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 10.—Fred Fitzsimmons, hefty old knuckle-baller with an enduring hex over the Pittsburgh Pirates, beat them again today for the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4 to 3.

Fitz allowed just six hits and the only runs against him came on Arky Vaughan's homer in the eighth after the Dodgers had completed their scoring.

It was the veteran's second start and second victory of the season. He stopped the Pirates six times last season without a setback and the year before trimmed them five out of six times.

Brooklyn put together ten hits and opened the scoring off Lefty Ken Heintzelman in the second on Dolph Camilli's thirteenth home run of the season. They added another in the fourth on two singles and Pete Reiser's double and sewed up the game with two runs in the seventh when Second Baseman Frank Gustine made two errors.

Manager Leo Durocher benched Peewee Reese and took over shortstop himself, handling four fielding chances flawlessly and getting two of the Dodgers' hits.

Transday, Kingoo Race to Dead Heat At Charles Town

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 10.—W. B. Pendlebury's Transday and C. O. Ferguson's Kingoo came into the wire as a team in today's seventh race and the judges, after consulting the photograph, gave a dead-heat verdict. A length and a half back came Alamode at the end of the battle of a mile and an eighth. Both Kingoo and Transday appeared to have the race locked up at different stages. Kingoo, under Jockey Bobby Bernhardt's handling, set the pace and appeared beaten when Jockey Sammy Palumbo brought Transday to the front entering the stretch. However, Kingoo rallied and caught the leader right at the end. After the winning pool was split the payoff on Transday waws $5.60, $6.20 and $5.40, while the mutuel on Kingoo was $9.40, $15 and 12.80.

Yanks Defeat Chisox, 8 to 3, Gain 2d Place

By the Associated Press

The New York Yankees set off their familiar but almost forgotten dynamite in the seventh and eighth innings today to overpower the Chicago White Sox, 8 to 3, and advance into second place in the American League.

Rookie Steve Peek shut out the Sox on one hit for eight innings, and for the first five of these frames Johnny Rigney was just as effective. Then in the sixth the Yanks batted around for five runs on five hits, one of them Frank Crosetti's homer with the bases loaded. In the seventh the added three additional tallies on four hits, including Charlie Keller's tenth homer with one on.

A single by Myril Hoag at the start of the third was the only hit allowed by Peek until the ninth, when the Sox stirred up a three-run rally on five singles.

It was New York's fourth consecutive triumph.

Mrs. Page Gets Sub-Par 67 At Greensboro

By the Associated Press

Greensboro, N. C., June 10.—Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 1938 Women's National Champion, shot today a 9-underpar 67, said by local pros to have been a world's record for women.

In winning the Sedgefield Country Club's one-day tournament by 18 strokes over a field of 123 players, the former champion played six holes in the rain, but had two eagles and six birdies. The score was three under men's par.

Feller Allows Griffs 4 Hits in 8th Straight Of Year; Nats Score On Bloodworth's Hit

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, June 10.—Bob Feller pitched against the Nats today, and you may jump to conclusions. The score was 4 to 1, and definitely not in favor of Washington. The Nats' one-game winning streak is no more.

Feller was taking advantage of the Nats' presence in town to record his thirteenth victory of the season and, by the way, his eighth straight. It seems that he gave up only four hits to the Nats and shut them out in the last seven innings. It seems, further, that Rapid Robert was pitching one-hit ball in those last seven innings.

It was Sid Hudson's misfortune to be pitching against Feller. The tall young Washington righthander was, under the circumstances, wasting some of the best pitching the Nats have received in recent weeks. Hudson gave up eight hits to the Indians, but two of the four runs he permitted were luck-anointed.

Nats Threaten

By their ability to get a hit off Feller, four different Nats distinguished themselves. They were Jimmy Bloodworth, Hudson himself, Roger Cramer and Cecil Travis. But for a period of five consecutive innings from the second until the ninth, none of the Washington athletes could get a hit, and only one reached base. Feller struck out a half-dozen.

It was not a completely simple triumph for Feller. Fact is that the Nats made something of a threat to tie the score in the ninth, when Travis singled to left with one out, and Vernon drew a walk. Jake Early, supposedly a power hitter, eased most of the tenson for Feller, however, by accepting a third strike, and Jimmy Bloodworth obligingly flied out to right field.

The Indians rocked Hudson for a run in the first inning with three consecutive singles after two were out. Gee Walker singled to deep left and didn't get a double because he fell down between bases, but he scored eventually when Heath singled to center and Weatherly sliced a single to left.

Bloodworth Doubles

The Nats stirred up their only run of the afternoon to tie the score in the second inning. That happened with two out, after Mickey Vernon had coaxed a base on balls from Rapid Robert. Jimmy Bloodworth whaled a two-bagger against the right-field fence and while it was bouncing around the outfield Vernon scampered all the way home from first base.

Hudson lost the game in the third inning when the Indians came up with three runs. The winning run scored on the first pitch of the inning. Ken Keltner walloped it over the right-field fence and through a Lexington Avenue window for his ninth homer of the year.

Two more Cleveland runs followed in the inning, but they were not completely Hudson's fault. He followed Keltner's homer by walking Walker. Heath bounced what appeared to be a double play ball toward shortstop and Hudson tried to grab it up. The ball caromed off his glove for a cheap single. Weatherly attempted to sacrifice the runners along but succeeded only in forcing Walker at third. Trosky walked, filling the bases and then it

Patty Berg, Helen Dettweiler Advance in Western Golf Open

Rain Hampers Play In 12th Annual Tourney; Betty Jameson Scores

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 10.—A sweet 16 of the country's golfing girls—a dozen "Misses" and the other four "Mrs."—fought their way through rain and mud today into the second round of match play in the twelfth annual Women's Western Open Golf Championship.

Favorites triumphed without exception in the opening 18-hole clashes.

Still fighting for the crown were the two favored professionals, red-haired Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, and Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C.; Betty Jameson, the National Amateur ruler from San Antonio; Virginia Guilfoil, of Buffalo, N. Y., twice winner of the Mason-Dixon tourney; dark horses Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., and Eleanor Dudley, of Chicago, and a host of lesser lights.

Only two of today's matches reached the final green Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, beating Dorothy Campbell, 16-year-old St. Louis star, on the last hole, and Mrs. Douglas Hill doing the same to Mrs. Arthur Theler in an All-Cincinnati scrap.

Miss Berg, yesterday's medalist with a subpar 71, skidded six strokes over par to win, 4 and 3, over Mrs. Jake Searl, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, and Miss Jameson also was six over in her 5-and-4 win over Mrs. George Wilcox, of Miami, Fla.

Miss Dettweiler had no trouble with Dorothy Foster, of Springfield, Ill., winning eight of the first nine holes with a two-over-par front nine to triumph, 7 and 6. Miss Guilfoil beat Aileen Ann Johnson, of Urbana, Ohio, 6 and 5.

Other first-round winners were Jeanne Cline, 17-year-old Bloomington, Ill., star; Dolly Schildmiller, youthful Cincinnati district queen; Georgia Tainter, of Fargo, N. Dak.; Betty Jane Haemerle, the 15-year-old St. Louis entrant; Mrs. James D. Platt, of Dayton, Ohio's medal play champ; Sue Land, of Richmond, Ind., and Mrs. Ralph Goodwin and Mrs. Burt Weil, both of Cincinnati.

Meet Mr. Nicholson, Cubs' Bat Sensation

Slugger Nicholson in a Favorite Pose

He Hides Behind a Meek Hitting Average but His Run-Producing Overshadows All Rivals

By the Associated Press

New York, June 10.—The most feared batter in the National League now is a fellow with a .250 batting average whom most baseball fans never have bothered to notice.

So this will introduce Bill Nicholson, of the Chicago Cubs, a 25-year-old bulldog who is only beginning to cut his eye-teeth at bat and eventually is going to be one of the blue ribbon boys of the big leagues.

Right now he is leading the senior circuit in runs batted in with 49 and has hit 12 home runs. These are robust totals that belie his batting average, which, puny as it is, still is higher than it has been any time previously this season.

One of his fondest admirers is Manager Jimmy Wilson, who says, "Nicholson is just getting started. He's a good ball player. In fact, I would say he will be a great ball player. He's better than a .300 hitter and one of these years he will come up with one of those big seasons."

This is foresightedness on the part of the Bruins' new manager because Nicholson's talent never has been recognized even in his own camp before.

He broke into baseball as one of the many collegians old Connie Mack was snapping up a few years back. He was graduated in 1936 from little Washington College in his home town of Chestertown, Md., and immediately joined the Philadelphia Athletics.

He was used principally as a pinch hitter, went to bat 12 times without getting a hit, and was consigned to the minors. In 1938 Mack sent him to Chattanooga in the deal for Dee Miles and in July, 1939, the Cubs bought him for $35,000.

Nicholson, a husky 6-footer with the kind of freckles that just show faintly under a deep tan, had been clouting Southern Association pitching at a .334 clip. In 58 games with the Cubs that fall he batted .295, socked 5 home runs and batted in 38 tallies.

Last year he batted .397, knocked in 98 runs and hit 25 homers. He got into the all-star game on a rain check when Teammate Hank Leiber turned down a bid because of illness. But still he was largely without honor.

Wilson explained the feeling today. "The idea got around that Nicholson couldn't hit left-handed pitching. So they had him in and out of the line-up all season. He never got settled. Southpaws still give him trouble and have kept down his average, but some of his best hits, particularly his homers, have been against lefties."

Feller Defeats Nats Again, 4 to 1

was that the Indians picked up two cheap runs.

Mack grounded to Pofahl and a double play appeared imminent, but there was shoddy handling of the ball, and when Bloodworth eventually threw into the dirt past Vernon at first base two runners crossed the plate.

Feller thus had his 4-1 lead, and the ball game. Hudson and Alex Carrasquel, who worked the eighth inning, pitched two-hit ball after the third, but the Nats were completely bamboozled by Feller. The only Washington athlete to reach base during one five-inning stretch was Pinch-hitter Cliff Bolton who drew a walk.

The ball game could not be called an upset.

Cubs Topple Giants From 3d Place, 11-0

By the Associated Press

New York, June 10.—The Chicago Cubs clubbed the New York Giants out of third place in the National League today, with Hank Leiber and Bill Nicholson batting in seven runs with two homers for an 11-to-0 triumph.

Southpaw Vernon Olsen held the Giants in check on seven scattered hits while his teammates made merry at the expense of Fiddler Bill McGee, who lost his fifth straight game since coming to the Giants from St. Louis in exchange for Harry Gumbert.

Leiber homered with the bases loaded in the first inning, and Nicholson hit his twelfth of the season with two on in the fifth, when the Cubs also got two other runs on a walk, a double by Leiber and Clyde McCullough's line single.

The Giants had beaten the Cubs in all five of their previous games.

Tigers Rally In Ninth, Beat Athletics, 4-3

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 10.—The Detroit Tigers came from behind with two runs in the ninth inning today to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 4 to 3, for the sixth successive time this season.

Big Al Benton, coming to the aid of Tommy Bridges in the eighth inning, was credited with the victory, his fifth in a relief role this year. The winning tally came when Pinch Hitter Barney McCosky doubled, Pat Mullin singled and took second on the throw to the plate, and Charley Gehringer singled Mullin home with the deciding run. The defeat was charged to Tom Ferrick, Connie Mack's third pitcher.

Before he left, Bridges fanned 14 batters for the league's top 1941 performance. He breezed along under a 2-to-0 lead his mates gave him over Lester McCrabb, but the Macks ganged up on the veteran right-hander in the late innings.

Catcher George (Birdie) Tebbetts of the Tigers broke a finger on his throwing hand and will be out of the line-up for ten days.

Steffes Stars As Fat Boy Ten Wins, 2 to 1

Harold Steffes pitched another gilt-edge game last night at Washington Softball Stadium as he led his Fat Boy teammates to a 2-1 victory over Carr Brothers and Boswell in the Capital City League. Steffes, whose two previous performances had resulted in no-hitters, including the only perfect game pitched in Washington softball annals, last night gave up but two hits. But for an unfortunate break when Arnold's ordinary single took a freak hop over Right Fielder Larry Mills' head and rolled to the fence for a home run, Steffes would not have been scored on.

Tom Dobyns, Carr Brothers hurler, granted only five hits. Warvel's triple and Gilbert's single in the final inning accounted for the winning Fat Boy tally to break a 1-1 deadlock.

In the second game, Civil Service put a damper on the U. S. Aggies National Night League debut by taking a 4-2 decision as Joe Martiz turned in a three-hit effort. Rosselli's homer and King's triple were the feature blows in the Civil Service four-hit attack.

Tonight Kavakos Grill, newly installed as league leaders by virtue of its 8-5 triumph of Monday over Yellow Cab, will take on the vastly improved Garvin's Grill ten in Capital City League play at 8 p. m. Clem Stralka's Service Station Redskins will meet Elite Laundry in the second game, an exhibition affair, at 9:15.

Warneke Gets Single

Warneke helped win his own game by opening the third inning with a single to center off Si Johnson. He scored on Jimmy Brown's double. Padgett singled to left to score Brown. In the fourth, Frank Crespi singled, advanced on a sacrifice and came home on Gus Mancuso's two-bagger.

Before the game the Phils announced they had signed Bill Harman, star 6-foot 4-inch catcher from the University of Virginia.

Fishing with JACK BELL

The importance of Maryland as a sport fishing area has grown rapidly during late years. The State is experiencing at the present time an increasing number of anglers attracted by favorable results with hook and line. This increased interest is shown not entirely in the confines of Maryland, but from a wide territory in the general region around the State as well.

JACK BELL

The relatively great water surface of Maryland, the large number of species of fish, and the abundance of the more choice forms account for the popularity which the State enjoys with the fishing fraternity.

Although Maryland has one of the shortest coast lines on the Atlantic Coast, more white marlin are caught off Ocean City than in all the combined waters of the Atlantic seaboard. And it isn't a case of marlin or nothing. School tuna are found in abundance, and there are lots of bonito and dolphin, at times large schools of big blue fish.

This past week fishing parties out of Ocean City came in with good catches of bonito, mackerel, porgies and bass. Blues, although scarce to date, are beginning to show up in increasing numbers. Most of the boats have brought in up to a half dozen or more blues weighing up to three pounds.

Of special interest was the landing of a 275-pound sturgeon having 65 pounds of roe. This catch was made in the nets of commercial fishermen off Ocean City. Six or more years ago sturgeon fishing was a profitable industry off Ocean City, but in the past years the catches diminished to nil. With caviar quoted at $2.75 a pound, and sturgeon meat at from 20 to 30 cents wholesale, it is no wonder that sturgeon fishing holds special attraction to some. However, there again the commercial fisherman would better himself if he would allow a fish like that to spawn. His catches would increase more rapidly, but no sooner are a few caught than fishermen begin to go after them in real earnest.

Capt. Jerome North, of Breezy Point, Md., reports big catches of hardheads caught in the past week on the "jooses." Boats bring in from 150 to 500 fish.

Bloody Point Light, a famous landmark off Kent Point on the Eastern Shore, is the area producing some very nice rockfish or striped bass. A number of Washington anglers last week made good catches, chumming with grass shrimp. A number of the boys have been getting some good rockfish at Piney Point, Md. Strange as it may seem, though, in this area the best sport is drift fishing with soft crabs, trolling as second choice.

Hardheads sort of fell off at Point-no-Point over the week-end, but trout or weakfish were caught in increasing numbers running up to 2½ pounds. One of these fine days the big tide runners will be hit by someone and there will be fun.

Fresh water trout fishing picked up well after the heavy rain Tuesday night and Wednesday of last week. The water is in fine shape now and fly fishermen are now having good sport. We fished Middle Creek and Fishing Creek over the week-end and had no trouble getting the limit. On Middle Creek brown trout were on the rampage, trout caught were all browns and all were the highly colored fellows. Every angler met said he was having good sport.

Orton Lake on the Orton Plantation between Southport and Wilmington, N. C., is reported producing large bass. Two anglers from Greensboro came in Saturday with four 4-pounders and one 5-pounder. Limit catches of bass, goggle eye and crappie are being made regularly.

Southport, N. C., reported the season's first barracuda were taken off Frying Pan Shoals this week-end. The expedition was the first in three weeks due to prevailing northeast winds, and though the party reported rough going they expressed themselves well satisfied with the cudas averaging 27 pounds, taken in an hour's fishing.

Thursday, June 5, a new chapter of the Izaak Walton League was organized in Alexandria, Va. Officers elected were E. C. Gibbs, president; Jay Reed, secretary; Harry Jarvis, treasurer. A vice president was not elected at this meeting, having been deferred until the next meeting.

Heurich Beats Cameo, 8-4, In League

Five errors on the part of its opponent was the Heurich Brewers' big weapon yesterday as they continued their dominance of The Washington Post-Industrial League with an 8-4 victory over Cameo Furniture on the South Ellipse.

Four of the misplays were charged to "Woody" Godfrey, regular third sacker of the furniture club who was moved to shortstop for the clash.

Held to eight hits by Frank Deavers, Cameo moundsman, Heurich profited by its foes' ineffective batting punch as much as from errors. It took a two-run lead in the first inning and held it through the third, when Cameo loaded the bases with nobody out but couldn't score. In the fourth it added another tally and sewed things up in the fifth with a three-run uprising.

Cameo's big inning, as the Beermen's Johnny Murnane hurled seven-hit ball, was the sixth. A walk, singles by Deavers and Bonifant, and Godfrey's double accounted for three runs.

Spankin' New Fairfax Links Provides Setting for Schoolboy Medal Playoff

The new Fairfax Country Club golf course, off Lee Highway, was given an official send-off yesterday as the three schoolboys who tied for the medal in recent metropolitan scholastic play staged a playoff. Left to right—Alton Willett, of Bethesda-C. C.; Earle Skinker, of Devitt, and Carroll Willett, also of Bethesda-C. C.

Alton Willett, who upset Defending Champion Skinker to take the crown in the schoolboy tournament, drives off the eighth tee as his opponents watch. From this angle a fine view of the "home" holes of the new layout may be seen

With its rustic bridge in the foreground, Fairfax' water hole is shown here. Putting on the seventh green are the three schoolboy stars. Skinker belatedly captured the medal with a 76 on the par 71 course. Carroll Willett was second with an 83 and 10 strokes back of the winner was Alton, the 1941 schoolboy champion

Skinker Bags Eagle, Takes School Medal

Credit for the first eagle on the recently constructed Fairfax Country Club golf course went to Earle Skinker, 1940 Metropolitan Schoolboy Champion, yesterday as he toured the layout in 76 strokes to win a much-delayed playoff for the medal of this year's scholastic tournament.

Skinker rammed home his third shot on the 440-yard par 5 tenth hole for his best effort of the day, though he turned in birdies on the fourth and thirteenth.

Convincingly beaten in the playoff was Alton Willett, the 1941 schoolboy champ from Bethesda-Chevy Chase, who upset Skinker in the recent finals. His 86 was 3 strokes worse than the score of his brother, Carroll, who was eliminated from the school match play tournament early. Alton appeared to be suffering a terrific letdown, most all his shots being badly muffed.

For Skinker the triumph was his third playoff victory in as many days. Sunday he won the Cummings Cup playoff and Monday he took Bannockburn Medal along with Merrill Whittlesey.

Despite his 5-over-par 76, Skinker was highly pleased with the new Fairfax layout. Its nine holes, with two tees for each, form one of the most scenic courses in the vicinity, he said.

"Give those greens a chance to settle and grass on the fairways a chance to thicken and Fairfax will be a real golf test."

In the doubles yesterday, Bill Breese and Mather defeated Jimmy Hardie and Bob Burgess, 6—2, 6—2. Barney Welsh and Buddy Adair are also scheduled to play today in the quarter-finals at 4.

Raiders, Tide Settle Championship Today

Minus the most important cog in its baseball machine, Western High today attempts to force Eastern's nine into its third straight runner-up role in the interhigh diamond series when the teams tangle at Western at 3:30.

The game, the third of a three-game title series, will decide the 1941 successor to Central as public school champion.

Bobby Leach, The Washington Post's All-Metropolitan first baseman last year, will be missing from the Raider lineup. Clean-up hitter throughout this season and the slugger whose bat was almost solely responsible for Western's place in the crown playoff, Leach was the victim of a freak accident last week in the second Eastern-Western game, twisting his right ankle so severely that he must remain on crutches for several weeks.

Getting himself set for a simple lob from Pitcher Clarence Kuldell on Reds Vernon's grounder, Leach stepped on the side of his foot. The member became so painful and swollen that he was forced to leave the game immediately and visit a doctor.

With the husky .367 hitter on the sidelines, Western will probably shift Leftfielder Bernie Cady to first base and insert Jim Malarkey in Cady's place. Catcher Gene Shoemaker may be given the clean-up batting spot.

Though starting pitchers for the two teams, as usual, will remain a deep, dark secret until game time, they will most likely be either Kuldell or Charley Hines for Western, and either Ken Curles or Ken Deavers for Eastern.

All have had a taste of series action so far. Curles and Hines locked in the first attempt at a playoff, giving up five and four hits, respectively, before the game was rained out in the fourth inning. In the next outing Hines started against Eastern's Ches Spieser, but was relieved by Kuldell in the sixth. Deavers took over for Spieser in the seventh and went ahead to bring Eastern a 7-3 victory.

Last week's second game, won by Western, 13-5, saw Kuldell pitch the first five and two-third innings for the Raiders and Hines relieve. Eastern started young Art Bray, but called in Deavers and Spieser before the slaughter was over.

Colonello, DeChard On Pastor-Scott Card

Italo Colonello, the big Italian heavyweight who was boomed as the successor to Primo Carnera, will furnish the first big test for Jimmy DeChard, Washington's newest professional campaigner, in a special six-rounder on the Bob Pastor-Buddy Scott card Monday night in the ball park.

Colonello, who has fought some of the best men in the business, is a veteran of half a dozen years' experience. Scott, who had been working out with DeChard, has shifted training quarters to Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest. Station WINX will start daily broadcasts on the workouts today from 1:05 to 1:15 p. m.

Joseph Himmelheber Scores Hole-in-One

Joseph Himmelheber made his first hole-in-one yesterday on the eighth hole at Manor Country Club, knocking an iron shot in the cup on the 151-yard part three hole.

Mrs. Himmelheber was a proud witness to the shot as was Mrs. J. E. Randels and Mrs. Elizabeth Foley.

Daingerfield, Well Known Turfman, Dies

Garden City, L. I., June 10.—Algernon Daingerfield, member of one of the most noted families in racing and assistant secretary of the Jockey Club since June 1, 1903, died this morning at his home here. He was 72 years old.

Mr. Daingerfield had been in ill health for the last two years, and during much of that time his daughter, Miss Margaret Daingerfield, had assisted him at his office at the Jockey Club in New York and represented him at the race tracks. His last official appearance was at the annual meeting of the Jockey Club in January.

As assistant secretary of the Jockey Club, which has jurisdiction over the race tracks in the New York City area, Mr. Daingerfield was its executive head. He supervised the licensing of jockeys and trainers, the registry and naming of all thoroughbreds and maintained relations not only with racing clubs throughout the United States but also in Europe. He exerted a great influence on racing and was believed to have possession of more intimate data on racing than any other individual in the United States.

Affectionately known as "Major" to his many friends, Mr. Daingerfield was equipped for his position by birth and training. He was born in Harrisonburg, Va., a son of the late Maj. Foxhall Alexander Daingerfield and member of a family which settled in Virginia in the seventeenth century. His father was manager of the Castleton Stud and of the racing interests of his brother-in-law, the late James R. Keene, and under his direction the Keene horses earned more than $5,000,000 in stakes here and abroad.

Mr. Daingerfield was graduated in 1888 from the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va. He worked on a small Virginia newspaper and later for The Washington Post before becoming secretary of the Washington Jockey Club. He held that post for a year before coming to New York. He was a member of the Turf and Field Club.

Woodmont Nears Team Golf Crown

Woodmont's entry in the second team matches of the Women's District Golf Association team competition drew 16½ points ahead of the second place team in yesterday's play at Argyle and with just two matches to play, or a total of 18 points, virtually clinched the title.

Woodmont defeated Congressional, 6½ to 2½, and with a 63½ point total is 16½ ahead of the Argyle sextet which moved into second place with a 47-point total. Army and Navy is just a half-point back and Columbia a point back in the race for the runner-up position.

Argyle defeated Beaver Dam, 7-2; Manor and Kenwood tied, 4½ each; Belle Haven won over Columbia, 5½ to 3½; Army-Navy won over Indian Spring, 5-4, and Washington defeated Chevy Chase, 5-4.

Manor barely held to its lead in the third team matches at Washington as it lost to Woodmont, 6-3. The Manorites lead Army and Navy by a half point, Columbia by one and Woodmont by two.

Congressional defeated Kenwood, 6½ to 2½; Army and Navy defeated Columbia, 5½ to 3½.

Louis Reverses Routine; Plans 'All Out' Drills

By the Associated Press

Greenwood Lake, N. Y., June 10. Joe Louis tossed a bombshell into his camp today when he announced personally that there will be no "off days" during the remainder of his training schedule for the June 18 match with Billy Conn at the Polo Grounds.

"I need all the boxing I can get for this bout," he asserted. The champion will train every day up to and including next Monday, which will represent ten consecutive days of boxing, the longest uninterrupted stretch with the gloves he has yet known.

With Promoter Mike Jacobs looking on the champion turned in an impressive workout today.

Billy Conn Honored

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 10 (AP). Billy Conn today received the Ring magazine's annual plaque as the fighter of the year for 1940.

Nat Fleischer, publisher of the magazine, made the presentation to the heavyweight title challenger in the ring at his training camp here.

The plaque, a handsome affair bearing the inscription "to Billy Conn, for high skill, sportsmanship and contribution to boxing welfare," was awarded to Conn in a vote of boxing writers all over the country.

Meet Menendez' Favorite Fighter

Lest it be forgot, it might be well to point out that the happiest man in the world—in event of a Buddy Scott victory over Bob Pastor next Monday night at Griffith Stadium—will be the fight's matchmaker, Senor Gabriel Lopez Faustina Menendez Gabe to you.

"GABE"

Menendez, who persuaded Scott to turn professional five years ago, is Buddy's old manager and still has a heavy interest in Buddy that will net him quite a few dollars if the 24-year-old heavyweight gets by Pastor.

District Boxing Commission rules forbid promoters or matchmakers from owning any interest in the fighters they present for public approval. Cagily, Menendez has turned over the managerial reins of Scott to the estimable Mr. Harry Raskin, a quiet-spoken chap who seldom has anything to say under 5,000 words.

But Mr. Raskin reportedly is high potentate of Scott's fortunes for this fight only. If Buddy gambles his all, beats Pastor and hits the "big time" as a result of the new prestige, the diminutive Menendez will draw down a nice hunk of change.

Menendez has invested more than you can mention, off hand, in the boxing career of Buddy.

Gabe met Scott when he was managing Buddy's older brother, Cowboy Howard Scott, who was a top-flight lightweight in the time of Tony Canzoneri and Lou Ambers.

The Cowboy brought Buddy to Gabe's attention after Buddy had fought in the national amateur tournament of 1935 in St. Louis. Buddy went home to Electra, Tex., to turn pro and after one fight came to Washington.

It appeared that Gabe had hit a bonanza in Buddy at first, for young Scott had 49 straight fights without a defeat, only two draws marring the record. To date, Menendez says, Buddy has had 83 pro fights, lost five decisions and fought two draws.

Under Menendez's management, Scott won 19 straight fights in Washington, and then came the partial parting of the ways. Gabe became Promoter Joe Turner's matchmaker and Scott's fortunes were placed in the hands of Hymie Caplin.

Scott's second loss came under Caplin's managership—to Dan Hassett here a year ago last winter. Buddy and Hymie couldn't get along, so Buddy soon split up and turned back to his old manager. Menendez, a gentleman who always keeps one eye on the future, always had maintained a "piece of" Scott—and that's why he'll be the happiest man in the world if Buddy beats Bob Pastor next Monday night.—HAILEY.

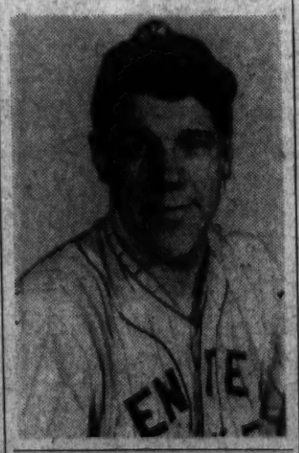
JACK REMINGTON



The big hands that major league scouts look for during their combing of the bushes belong to Jack Remington with a vengeance. Without too much exaggeration, his mitts would cover a manhole cover without a great deal showing through.

A native of Baltimore, Jack came to this city when 14 years old and immediately started his sandlot baseball career with the Mount Rainier High School Club. He's been at third base for the Center Market Team of the Departmental League since it was organized last year and, unless somebody gives him an extra special offer, he'll probably be with the Marketmen until they break up house.

Now 23 years old, Remington is considered one of the best big-time prospects in town, both offensively and defensively. He covers the ground around third sensationally and with his big hands and natural fielding ability stops grounders half the other "hot corner" keepers in town could never reach.

Best of his recent batting efforts was the homer he slammed against General Accounting Office last week. It sailed over the East Ellipse outfield and into the South Ellipse infield.

Married and with an 8-month-old son, Jack gives as the reason for his devotion to baseball—"Guess its just the nautral thing for me to do." BURNETT.

Mason Dixon Scores Handily in Charles Town Race Purse

Jockey Kirk Gives Victor Good Ride

Beaming Lady Runs Second, Don Orlan Is Third; Pay Off Is $5.80 for $2

By Walter Haight
A Stag Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 10.—Making the third start of his racing career, Mrs. H. S. Clark's Mason Dixon, one of the best-bred horses on the grounds, scored a handy victory in the Appalachia Purse. The 3-year-old gelding, by Whichone out of a Man o' War mare, held an advantage of 2½ lengths over Beaming Lady, owned by H. M. Luttrell & Sons, at the end of a test of 7 furlongs. Mrs. J. L. Furr's Don Orlan, once a Kentucky Derby hope, was third and three lengths from second money in the field of six.

In taking his second set of brackets in three tries Mason Dixon was capably handled by Jockey Carson Kirk of the Silver Spring (Md.) saddle Kirks. The gelding was the shortest-price winner here in three days, paying $5.80 in the role of favorite. His time was 1:26, ordinary for the route over a fast track.

Jockey E. Churchill took Beaming Lady to the top in the run to the first turn and the mare drew out to a four-length lead. Don Orlan and Chakra were rnnning head and head behind the pacemaker while Kirk was allowing Mason Dixon to settle into stride. Kirk saved ground with his charge and moved through to collar Beaming Lady as Don Orlan and Chakra faded.

In the stretch run, Mason Dixon drew out gradually. Kirk looked back on both sides, found no challengers and took the gelding in hand. Churchill kept knocking on Beaming Lady, but the effort only sealed second money.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUMMER STOCK, $10.40, $3.80, $3.00; CHALOTAUR, $3.20, $2.60; KISSEM, $2.80.

SUMMER STOCK took command at once, drew clear and was not seriously threatened while winning easily. CHALOTAUR improved her position on the outside, but hung in the final drive. KISSEM moved up with a bold rush on the backstretch, but could not gain in the straightaway. WOOD DEAR showed a good effort.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Richard Kirk, the South Carolina breeder and sportsman, was a visitor yesterday. He said that efforts will be made to pass a racing bill in his State within the near future. The Spirit of Jefferson, the weekly paper here, says a special starting gate has been constructed for me at the St. James Church chicken dinner tomorrow night. There is a rumor that they will serve me one of the phoney lead flamingoes out of the infield so I'm going to take a blowtorch and a metal saw to use instead of a knife and fork. The Bennings Stable has lost a good 2-year-old. Cap's Queen, coming right along in her training, pulled up with a crippled knee. It is unlikely that she will ever race. We have a brand new one in the barn named Sallipatica and no wisecracks, please. Jockey Willie Dufford is limping around as the result of a knee injury suffered leaving the gate. Jockey Albert Vesseli also is nursing a bruised leg. Maj. Goss L. Stryker, president of the Laurel track, was a visitor yesterday. Martin Bletzacker, the jockey, was on the sick list and canceled his mounts for the day. Henry Rodier and the boys from the Washington Golf and Country Club will make their annual invasion of this territory today. The feature event has been named for the club and is a test of 6½ furlongs involving seven sprinters. After seeing Don Orlan run around here it is hard to believe that he was once a Kentucky Derby candidate. Clymene got in yesterday's eighth race the hard way. When we went to scratch, there were six other scratches placed. This meant a draw and Clymene drew into the action. She was over her head and did about all we expected. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—MISS MAKER might be better suited at a longer route, but she is fit as hands make horses and I'm going to string along. LIKELY LAD will be ready to turn on the heat and is dangerous. NAVIGATION for the minor award.

Second race—SCHLEY GOREE seems to have a lock and key on this purse. Needs only the right ride. WINTONA will improve greatly on a fast track. The Bennings Stable's MAETAKE ran so poorly last out I hardly know what to expect.

Third race—COUNSUELLO is capable of tying this field in knots. Carries top weight of 116 pounds, but I see no reason for mistakes. SCARLET FLAME has been fairly consistent. Light weight gives MEADOW GOLD a chance to be a serious factor.

Fourth race—BALLYHAUNIS breaks from the rail position and should lead all the way in this field. Root will do the riding. FUSIONETTE had early trouble and then ran a smashing race last out. MISS FIDGET would be close if taken off the reserve list.

Fifth race—GOANTELL came back after being away a long time to run second. This one is as sharp as a tack. HIGH AIM is better than shown in the mud recently. DONA MONTEZ to take care of the others.

Sixth race—BALKANESE, in present form, might beat any horse. Promises to do a lot of knocking in this field and I'm going to be there. REMOLEE must be better than that last. SILVER BEAM for the show end.

Seventh race—RUSSELL McGEE could be the right one in this field. Has had poor racing luck and deserves a chance to take this. CAPSTICK and NETTA WOOD to take care of the place and show.

Eighth race—EXHORT appears well placed in the day's finale. IRISH OAK surprised the talent last out and should be a threat. EXTRA GOOD is capable of taking it all.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take SCOOTIE, LADY ANDY and COCKLEBUR.

Best bet—COUNSUELLO.

J. & L. Steel Will Revamp Stock Setup

New York, June 10.—One of the Nation's pioneer steelmakers, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., notified its stockholders and the Securities and Exchange Commission today that it desired a complete revamping of its capital structure.

It called the shareholders to a special meeting July 22 at Pittsburgh to vote on proposals for:

Merger into the corporation of two subsidiaries, Vesta Coal Co. and Shannopin Coal Co., which hold 35,000 acres of Pennsylvania coal fields with estimated resources of 293,000,000 tons of coal.

Conversion of the outstanding $58,713,600 par value of present 7 per cent preferred stock, including accrued dividends of $45.75 a share or a total of $26,861,472 as of April 1, and,

Conversion of the outstanding 576,320 shares of present common stock into new securities.

No dividends have been paid on the common stock since 1931 and no full dividends have been paid on the preferred since 1932.

Plan Is Detailed

The plan provides for the exchange, share for share, of new common stock (no par value) for present common stock and the exchange of each share of present 7 per cent preferred stock for:

One-half share of new 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock, series A ($100 par); one-half share of new 5 per cent cumulative preferred stock series B, convertible ($100 par), each full share of which may be converted at any time into three shares of new common stock, and one and one-quarter shares of new common stock.

Net Rises Sharply

A financial statement attached to the notice of the special meeting shows consolidated net profit for the first four months of 1941 of $5,224,810, more than half the $10,277,029 profit of 1940. In 1939 the company netted $3,188,944, and it operated at a deficit of $5,597,958 in 1938.

Jones & Laughlin, a partnership of the Jones and Laughlin families, had its beginning under B. F. Jones in 1850. It is the fourth largest steel producer in the country, owning iron ore properties in Michigan and Minnesota as well as coal mines, railroads and steamships.

The pay roll of the parent company and subsidiaries numbers about 35,000 employes. In 1940, with an average of 32,000 workers, the payroll was $55,810,570.

Dividend on Preferred

Pittsburgh, June 10 (AP).—Directors of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation today announced a dividend of $1.25 on account of arrearages on cumulative 7 per cent preferred stock, payabel July 1 to stockholders of record June 19. The regular dividend on the stock was passed.

New York Cotton

New York, June 10 (AP).—Cotton futures continued their forward advance today despite the increased resistance of profit taking and spot house hedging. Buying to fix prices for mill account after heavy business in gray goods in addition to protective mill buying and speculative support lifted prices to new four-year highs for the third consecutive day. Final prices were 10 to 14 points up.

Concern over the progress of the new cotton crop was aggravated by reports of severe storms and flood damage in parts of Texas and forecasts of further rain in sections of the Southwest.

The Worth Street cotton gray goods market handled about 10,000,000 yards of print cloths and related items as traders seemed reluctant to operate too far in the future with the threat of price ceilings and rationing still present.

No exports reported today; season so far, 988,707; port receipts, 14,327; port stocks, 3,315,482.

May Shipments Best on Record, U. S. Steel Says

New York, June 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by the U. S. Steel Corporation in May were the highest for any month in the history of the company. They amounted to 1,745,295 net tons, an increase of 57,621 tons as compared with last April and an increase of 661,238 as compared with May, 1940.

For 1941 through May shipments totaled 8,384,240 tons, as against 5,078,714 net tons in the first five months of 1940.

The previous high month was March, 1941, when 1,720,366 tons were shipped. Prior to that the highest month was May, 1929, with shipments of 1,107,874 tons.

Steel Output Near Peak

New York, June 10 (AP).—Steel produced in May totaled 7,101,759 tons, a drop of less than a half of 1 per cent from the March peak of 7,131,641 tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute announced today. In April output was 6,757,728 tons and in May, 1940, it was 4,967,782 tons.

During May, the steel industry operated at an average of 99.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 97.6 per cent in April and 71.8 per cent in May of last year.

Production of alloy steels rose to a new high of 4,966,900 net tons in 1940, exceeding by nearly 60 per cent the 1939 production of 3,212,000 tons.

Living Costs Rise 2.6 Pct. in Year

New York, June 10 (AP).—The cost of living of wage earners' families in the United States increased 0.6 per cent during May, the Industrial Conference Board said today in its monthly survey. Increased food prices were said to be largely responsible for the higher living costs.

Living costs were 2.6 per cent greater than in May, 1940, and 21.9 per cent higher than in April, 1933. They still were 11.7 per cent lower than in May, 1929, the report said.

U. S. Predicts 12% Larger Wheat Crop

A wheat crop of 910,699,000 bushels, surpassed only five times in the country's history, was said by the Agriculture Department yesterday to be indicated by conditions June 1. However, reports have told of some local damage from excessive rains since then.

The indicated crop would be 12 per cent larger than last year's 816,686,000 bushels and far above a 1930-39 average of 747,507,000 bushels.

The estimate included 697,692,000 bushels of winter wheat and 213,007,000 bushels of spring wheat. For the former, this was an increase of 45,000,000 bushels over a month ago and compares with last year's production of 589,151,000 bushels. It was the first forecast on spring wheat.

If borne out, the department's forecast would give the country a total supply of nearly 1,300,000,000 bushels—including a surplus of about 385,000,000 bushels from previous crops—to meet a normal need of about 700,000,000 bushels.

The department reported the June 1 condition of the commercial apple crop was above the 1934-39 average in the Eeastern and Central States and equal to the average in the West, but was generally below last year on the same date.

In each of the North Atlantic States conditions were reported below a year ago, and in New Jersey an unusually heavy drop of young fruit pointed to a smaller crop.

Varied prospects were reported in Pennsylvania and Michigan, while conditions were described as satisfactory in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Delaware, Virginia, Delaware, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Comparatively light production was forecast for Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and West Virginia, while North Carolina and Arkansas production was forecast above the average.

Antiaircraft Firms Getting First Call On Machine Tools

New York, June 10 (AP).—The magazine American Machinist said today that machine tools were so urgently needed for antiaircraft plants that this program has temporarily taken precedence over requirements for the bombing plane program.

The bombing program, the magazine said, had precedence over almost all other defense production. New plants which were intended for other plane manufacture are likely to be used for heavy bombers.

The magazine placed Allis production at 400 a month and said that it would be increased to 1,000 by December. Vultee and Northrup have ordered tools jointly so that all parts will be interchangeable in the production of the new Vengeance dive bomber for the British.

Cont. Baking to Vote On Capital Revamping

New York, June 10 (AP).—Stockholders of Continental Baking Co. will vote at a special meeting at Wilmington, Del., July 15 on proposals to revamp the capital structure by retirement of part of preferred stock and exchange the present "A" and "B" shares for new common.

Under the plan the company would borrow the funds to retire the preferred through tenders to be invited at not more than $105 a share and dividend arrears. Each share of "A" stock would be exchanged for three shares of new common and each "B" share would be exchanged for one-tenth of a share of new common.

Int. Paper Declares Dividend on Arrears

New York, June 10 (AP).—The International Paper & Power Co. today declared dividends totaling $6.25 on the 5 per cent preferred stock payable June 28 to holders of record June 20.

Of the total $5 will apply toward accumulations and $1.25 for the current quarter. Dividend arrears will be $5 after the payment.

International Paper Co., of which I. P. & P. owns most of the stock, also declared a dividend of $6.25 a share on its 7 per cent preferred stock, payable to holders of record on the same dates.

Broadest Buying Movement in Month Pushes Stock List $1 to $3 Ahead

New York, June 10.—The stock market extended its recovery swing today on the largest volume in more than a month. Gains for favored steels, motors, rails, farm implements and specialties ranged from 1 to better than 3 points, but a little selling at the tail end of the proceedings cut top marks substantially in some instances.

Not only were dealings unusually lively but the market was one of the broadest of the year. Individual issues traded numbered 820, against 695 yesterday when trends were rising. Of the total 566 were up, 94 down and 160 unchanged.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks held a net adance of .6 of a point at 41.4, higest level since April 7. Except for one slight recession, the composite has been on the upward move since June 2. Transfers of 825,780 shares compared with 440,040 Monday and were the best since May 6.

Credit for the comback was given partly to improved sentiment stemming from the steps taken by Washington to crush defense strikes. In addition, bullishness was bolstered by growing indications Congress may put out a tax program suitable to industry. Business developments served as a prop, especially the disclosure that United States Steel's May shipments established a new record for any month. Then, too, there was a batch of pleasing dividends and earnings statements.

Neither Mussolini's defiant speech nor other war bulletins disturbed boardrooms to any noticeable extent.

U. S. Steel common lost most of its run-up of the morning, finishing ahead ¼ at 56½. Prominent on the upside were Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Monigomery Ward, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse General Electric, American Can and International Harvester.

International Paper reduced its arrearages on its 5 per cent preferred and the stock added 1⅜ at a new 1941 peak. Other new highs for the year included Standard Oil (N. J.), Phillips Petroleum, General Steel Castings preferred, Celotex, Loft, Union Carbide and Consolidated Aircraft.

Jones & Laughlin preferred, up about 12 points last week, lost 1, at 108, in the wake of a dividend declaration of $1.25 a share on this stock and approval by directors of a plan for recapitalization which would clear up preferred accumulations.

North American Aviation, with the Army breaking the strike in the company's California plant, was off ⅛, at 14⅛. Du Pont dipped at the last, along with Texas Corporation and Public Service of N. J.

Sherwin Williams was up 5⅜ points in the Curb. Lesser forward sprinters were Niles-Belmont-Pond, Pittsburg Plate Glass, Todd Shipyards and Hayden Chemical. Transactions here were around 142,000 shares versus 77,000 the day before.

The bond market shared rather liberally in bullish enthusiasm prevalent in most markets today.

A number of railroad loans pushed up major fractions to more than a point, the entire corporate list was dotted with gainers of fractions and some specialties added 2 or more. United States Governments and foreign issues remained quiet and mixed.

As on past occasions, it was the rails that got off to the best start and held leadership all day. Issues scoring the largest gains included Delaware & Hudson 4s at 53¾, Rock Island General 4s at 20⅛, American & Foreign Power 5s at 55¼, Baltimore & Ohio convertibles of '80 at 28½ (sales $294,000, par value), North Western General 5s at 24½, Laclede Gas 5½s at 66¼, Missouri Pacific 5s at 23¾, Southern Pacific 4½s, at 52¾ and Southern Railway 4s at 62.

RFC to Take Over Everglades Issue

Tallahassee, Fla., Jun 10 (AP).—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation agreed today to assume the Everglades drainage district's $5,660,000 refunding bond issue and become the sole creditor of the district. The refunding bonds will bear 4 per cent interest, and will mature serially in 3 to 33 years.

The refunding loan will wipe out existing original bonds, judgments and other claims. Gov. Holland said delinquent taxes of about $20,000,000 against district property would be canceled.

The district embraces about 4,800,000 acres in 11 south Florida counties.

$725,000 Tax Claims Filed Against Spreckels

San Francisco, June 10 (AP).—Three income tax deficiency judgments totaling more than $725,000 were filed in Federal court today against Rudolph Spreckels, whose father pioneered sugar refining on the West Coast.

The industrialist, now 69, acquired a fortune so large at the age of 26 that he was able to retire.

Cash Circulation Sets 8-Year Top

By the Associated Press

Money in circulation exceeded $70 per person last month for the first time since the banking holiday of 1933.

The Treasury announced that on May 31 coin and currency in circulation outside the Treasury and Federal Reserve banks totaled $9,355,923,855, which was an average of $70.50 for each of the estimated 132,707,000 persons in the continental United States.

This was $2.11 more than at the end of April and $12.11 more than a year ago.

Gold Imports Total $6,254,3995 in Week

By the Associated Press

Gold imports totaled $6,254,395 in the week ended June 4. The Commerce Department, announcing this figure yesterday, said it was approximately $300,000 higher than the preceding week. Principal shipments were $3,871,070 from Cnada and $1,247,401 from the Philippines.

Foreigners withdrew $1,119,136 from their earmarked gold deposits in Federal Reserve banks, leaving $1,919,647,038 in such accounts.

Industrial Output Sets All-Time Top

The Commerce Department said yesterday industrial production in May "brought the largest aggregate output on record."

Freight car loadings, electric power output and retail trade also set records.

"Demand resulting from the acceleration of the defense program was revealed on other business fronts so that income, production and consumption all are now in record volume," the department announced.

"Price influences of an inflationary nature which have gathered strength in recent months emerged more openly in May to bring about the speculative advance in the early autumn of 1939," the statement said.

"The most considerable price advance in May was recorded among farm and food products."

D. C. Agents Qualify

J. D. Marsh and E. R. Hough, Washington representatives of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., have qualified for attendance at the company's 1941 convention at Hot Springs, Va., on June 23, 24 and 25.

U. A. L. Traffic Spurts

The United Air Lines yesterday reported that its Washington office in May showed an 87 per cent increase in revenues over the like month last year. Revenue passenger miles flown by the system in May increased more than 36 per cent over May, 1940.

Dust Bowl Gets Too Much Rain; Wheat Damaged

Chicago, June 10 (AP).—Wheat traders are getting a taste of something they had thought improbable, if not impossible—too much rain in what once was the Nation's dust bowl, of all places!

As a result, the outcome of the new hard winter wheat crop in the far Southwest, the Nation's principal surplus producing region, has been affected, grain experts said today. This is the worst time in the year for excessive moisture. Wheat should be ripening and harvesters should be at work. Instead, farmers are chafing at the delay.

The rains, spreading north and east, have been a boon to the corn and spring wheat belts, where crops are just getting a start.

Slab Zinc Output Increases Slightly

New York, June 10 (AP).—Production of domestic slab zinc of all grades totaled 64,657 tons in May, compared with 63,210 in April and 51,437 in May, 1940, the American Zinc Institute announced today.

Shipments in the month amounted to 63,638 tons, against 62,274 in April and 57,224 a year ago. Stocks on hand of 8,305 tons were slightly ahead of 7,286 at the end of April, but were all but negligible when compared with the 72,629 tons on hand at the end of May a year ago.

The huge drop in stocks from a year ago reflected the urgent demand for the metal for defense work.

Bismuth and Resins Under Export Rules

By the Associated Press

Bismuth, natural gums and resins and zirconium were placed under the export licensing system yesterday by Presidential proclamation.

The White House said their exportation must be controlled "due to the accelerating needs of the National defense program." The control over the three materials becomes effective July 2.

Oil Refineries Boost Output To 90.7% Rate

By the Associated Press

New York, June 10.—Daily average crude oil production increased 30,600 barrels last week, principally through a rise in California's output, the weekly report of the American Petroleum Institute disclosed today. Daily production averaged 3,816,700 barrels compared with 3,816,950 a year ago.

Reporting refineries speeded operations to 90.7 per cent of potential refining capacity from 82.6 per cent the week before. Runs of crude oil to stills for the industry as a whole were estimated at 3,880,000 barrels a day against 3,699,000 the previous week and 3,608,000 a year ago.

Gasoline production increased to an estimated 13,294,000 barrels for the week from 12,380,000 the week before. Faster consumption reduced gasoline stocks, however, to 92,522,000 barrels at the end of the week from 93,845,000 a week earlier. A year ago stocks totaled 99,401,000 barrels.

Group Advises More Retreading By Tire Dealers

New York, June 10 (AP).—The National Association of Rubber Manufacturers has recommended that tire dealers enter the retreading business as a step in conserving rubber.

The association's recommendation follows closely upon statements by several leaders in the industry that rubber consumption by civilians might be sharply curtailed in the second half of 1941.

Greater use of such available expedients as retreading would do much in the way of conservation in the replacement market, it was pointed out, and augment other efforts in that direction, including the 20 per cent curtailment in new-car production.

How Unwilling Sellers Found Willing Buyers - for a Great Cause

Several months ago the investment world was set agog by the announcement that Britain, in order to acquire funds for needed purchases, would dispose of British-held American common stocks in the American market. Since then more than $400,000,000 of such securities have been distributed by investment firms, including ourselves.

To preclude unwarranted sacrifice of values which might have been the inevitable result of offering such large blocks of securities in the open market, the facilities of investment firms like ours were called upon to aid in fast, orderly distribution. Thanks to the cooperation of the New York and other Stock Exchanges, these securities found their way to American investors both on the Exchange and through "off the board" transactions. Thus unwilling sellers found willing buyers - and for a great cause.

The ready demand for these stocks prompted us to prepare analyses of 15 companies - the backbone of American industry - whose stocks figured in the British liquidation:

AMERICAN VISCOSE*	GREAT NORTHERN RY.
BETHLEHEM STEEL	KENNECOTT COPPER
CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RY.	NATIONAL DAIRY PROD.
GENERAL ELECTRIC	PENNSYLVANIA R. R.
GENERAL FOODS	SAFEWAY STORES
SEARS ROEBUCK
STANDARD OIL CO. N.J.
TEXAS CORPORATION
U. S. STEEL
F. W. WOOLWORTH

The attractiveness of these stocks from an investment viewpoint may be judged from the fact that a portfolio consisting of only one share of each, having a market value of approximately $557, would yield 6.8% based on 1940 dividends (except in case of American Viscose and Great Northern Railway, which are taken on basis of last dividend payments at annual rates of $2 per share).

If you would like to receive one or all of these analyses, without obligation, you are invited to write, telephone or call at our office.

Sincerely yours,

Catholic U. Graduates Told to Work

Catholic University paid tribute to its honor students in the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Architecture and Engineering yesterday as the fourth annual class day was held in McMahon Hall on the campus.

Dr. Joseph P. Derby, of Springfield, Mass., a member of the class of '15, told the graduating class that success in any effort comes only to those who are willing to sacrifice and toil and sweat.

"Man has always had to work hard. Usually he has secured a good reward—security, the comforts of a good home, hours of leisure and a lift to his soul.

"Perhaps in the past we expected too much for too little effort. Today lost bodies and soft souls are filling the homes, the schools, the professions, the market places and the country as a whole. Let us get away from all this and rededicate our lives to the service of God and man as life was intended from the beginning of time."

Leo B. Brady, valedictorian of the class, declared in his valedictory address:

"The conflicts of our generation are perhaps more overt, more terrifyingly urgent than those of some other eras, but our goal, which we have learned is an eternal one, is not different from that toward which youth, all mankind has striven since the beginning of the world."

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, presided at the class day exercises.

Commencement exercises will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at the university.

PRETTYMAN

E. Barrett Prettyman is the new president of the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, succeeding Francis W. Hill, jr.

At a meeting of members of the association at the Mayflower Hotel last night, announcement of the vote of the annual election of officers was made. Polls had been open from noon to 8 p. m. in the Bar Association Library.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, Joseph C. McGarraghy; second vice president, Justin L. Edgerton; secretary, Wilbur L. Gray; treasurer, Milton W. King; directors, Arthur P. Drury, Paul E. Lesh and George E. McNeil.

In a report covering his term in office, Hill, the outgoing president, declared that real progress has been made during the past year in fostering uniformity among Government administrative agencies, regulating and disposing of controversies between the Government and its citizens. In the report, Hill cited the following activities of the organization during his term:

Women attorneys were given full rights for membership; the District Bar group was the first association in the United States to appoint a committee on national defense; appeals have been made for a new District Court Building on the site of the old Pension Office; the local body was among the first to join the Inter-American Bar Association; it sponsored changes in the rules and practices of the Police and Municipal Courts.

During last night's meeting, the association presented Thomas Doyle, deputy marshal of Municipal Court, with a watch. Doyle has been acting as sergeant-at-arms at the bar association meetings for five years.

Chorus Here Sings Words From Isaiah

From the prophecy of Isaiah came the text of "The Peaceable Kingdom," written for chorus voices by Randall Thompson, which the Washington Choral Society presented before an audience of more than 200 at the Calvary Methodist Church last night.

Louis Potter led the choral group through the eight choruses of the work. Organ interludes by Lyman McCrary interspersed the eight movements.

The sinfulness of man as visualized by Isaiah was the theme of the first five choruses which moved with the slowness of the Hebrew prophet's despair of his people as he chanted:

"Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! It shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him . . .

"Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand! Howl, O gate; cry, O city; thou art dissolved."

In the last three choruses it was promised in more joyful notes to the righteous that "Ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace . . . Ye shall have a song, as in the night when a holy solemnity is kept."

McCrary's organ selections included Handel's Concerto in B flat No. 2, Prelude on "Now the Sun's Declining Rays," by Bruce Simonds; "Cortege and Litany," by Marcel Dupre; dige in the form of a Passacaglia, by Douglas Moore, and Toccata, by Frescobaldi.

Faust Is Presented By Howard Students

THE CAST

Siebel ..... Helen Green
Martha ..... Viola Mansilla
Wagner ..... Bryant Walker
Premiere danseuse ..... Ada Fisher
Premiere danseur ..... David Lear

More than 3,000 persons assembled on Howard University campus last night for the al fresco student performance of Charles Gounod's grand opera "Faust," with Michael Bartlett, screen and radio tenor, in the title role.

Presented under direction of Count Kai de Vermond, with Mary Formwalt at the piano, and Louis Vaughn Jones as assistant conductor and concert master in charge of student orchestration, the rendition by colored university students proved an undertaking that tested all of their dramatic and operatic abilities.

To Ruth Logan, who appeared two years ago as Leonora in "Il Trovatore" and in the past two years as Marguerite in "Faust," Dr. Johnson presented a gold key on behalf of the opera committee for three years' successful work in this field.

Contract Bridge

Look only at the West cards of today's hand and study the bidding; then select an opening lead which you think may defeat South's six-spade contract.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ Q J 7 5 ♡ 10 ◇ K J 5 ♣ A K J 7 3
WEST: ♠ 5 6 2 ♡ 7 4 3 ◇ A 7 4 3 ♣ Q 8 6
EAST: ♠ 10 ♡ K 9 6 5 2 ◇ Q 9 8 6 ♣ 9 5 4
SOUTH: ♠ A K 8 4 3 ♡ A Q J 8 ◇ 10 2 ♣ 10 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	4 NT	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

No opening lead.

Josephine Culbertson was sitting West when this hand was played. The situation appeared almost hopeless to her, as her club queen seemed worthless and any possible heart strength in her partner's hand would be under South, who had bid the suit. She finally decided that the diamond suit was her only chance. North's strong bidding probably placed him with the king, so Mrs. Culberston underled her diamond ace, hoping to find East with the queen. South played small from dummy, East won the queen, and a diamond returned to West's ace set the small-slam bid one trick.

Europe Still Needs Imports

Complete control of the European continent would leave Germany "far from economically self-sufficient," the Brookings Institution reported yesterday on the basis of a study by Dr. Cleona Davis.

A Nazified Europe, according to the report, would be similar to old Germany with respect to foreign trade—a net importer of food and raw materials and a net exporter of manufactured goods.

But, says Dr. Davis, it would have to import substantially more raw materials than Germany did alone.

He adds: If the Nazi area were expanded beyond European boundaries to include all of the Mediterranean countries except Turkey, the economic unit would be somewhat better balanced. But it would still have to buy large quantities of raw materials and foodstuffs from the rest of the world and to export manufactured goods in payment.

Even if Russia were included in the area, Dr. Davis reports, the need to import foodstuffs and raw materials would not be greatly reduced under Russia's present production rate.

Dr. Davis makes no attempt to forecast the outcome of the present conflict nor its effects on the future political organization and administration of the area. Inherent advantages and handicaps revealed by past experience will remain, it is stated, whether the political organization and administration are such as to promote or to obstruct full utilization of resources.

Senate Passes Draft Limit

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved legislation authorizing deferment from Army training of all men who attain their twenty-eighth birthday by July 1, 1941.

Effect of the measure will be to lower the maximum draft age—now 35—to 27. Technically, men from 28 to 35 still would be registered for service and the President could rescind their deferment if conditions warrant. The status of men who have already been inducted would not be affected.

The plan is an amendment to the Selective Service Act passed last year. It is part of a bill still before the Senate, pending completion of action on a rider to permit the Government to operate strike-bound plants. The draft revision was sponsored by Senator Chan Gurney (Democrat), of South Dakota, and approved by Active Selective Service Director Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

Senator Lister Hill (Democrat), Alabama, floor pilot of the measure, said there was "no doubt" that President Roosevelt would issue a blanket deferment for men in the 28-to-35 age bracket, but he conceded in response to inquiries that the bill makes such deferment directionary, not mandatory.

Catholic U. Graduates Told to Work

Catholic University paid tribute to its honor students in the College of Arts and Sciences and the School of Architecture and Engineering yesterday as the fourth annual class day was held in McMahon Hall on the campus.

Dr. Joseph P. Derby, of Springfield, Mass., a member of the class of '15, told the graduating class that "success in any effort comes only to those who are willing to sacrifice and toil and sweat.

"Man has always had to work hard. Usually he has secured a good reward—security, the comforts of a good home, hours of leisure and a lift to his soul.

"Perhaps in the past we expected too much for too little effort. Today soft bodies and soft souls are filling the homes, the schools, the professions, the market places and the country as a whole. Let us get away from all this and rededicate our lives to the service of God and man as life was intended from the beginning of time."

Leo B. Brady, valedictorian of the class, declared in his valedictory address:

"The conflicts of our generation are perhaps more overt, more terrifyingly urgent than those of some other eras, but our goal, which we have learned is an eternal one, is not different from that toward which all youth, all mankind has striven since the beginning of the world."

The Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, presided at the class day exercises.

Commencement exercises will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at the university.

Prettyman Heads D.C. Bar Association

PRETTYMAN

At a meeting of members of the association at the Mayflower Hotel last night, announcement of the vote of the annual election of officers was made. Polls had been open from noon to 8 p. m. in the Bar Association Library.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, Joseph C. McGarraghy; second vice president, Justin L. Edgerton; secretary, Wilbur L. Gray; treasurer, Milton W. King; directors, Arthur P. Drury, Paul E. Lesh and George E. McNeil.

In a report covering his term in office, Hill, the outgoing president, declared that real progress has been made during the past year in fostering uniformity among Government administrative agencies, regulating and disposing of controversies between the Government and its citizens. In the report, Hill cited the following activities of the organization during his term:

Women attorneys were given full rights for membership; the District Bar group was the first association in the United States to appoint a committee on national defense; appeals have been made for a new District Court Building on the site of the old Pension Office; the local body was among the first to join the Inter-American Bar Association; it sponsored changes in the rules and practices of the Police and Municipal Courts.

During last night's meeting, the association presented Thomas Doyle, deputy marshal of Municipal Court, with a watch. Doyle has been acting as sergeant-at-arms at the bar association meetings for five years.

Chorus Here Sings Words From Isaiah

From the prophecy of Isaiah came the text of "The Peaceable Kingdom," written for chorus voices by Randall Thompson, which the Washington Choral Society presented before an audience of more than 200 at the Calvary Methodist Church last night.

Louis Potter led the choral group through the eight choruses of the work. Organ interludes by Lyman McCrary interspersed the eight movements.

The sinfulness of man as visualized by Isaiah was the theme of the first five choruses which moved with the slowness of the Hebrew prophet's despair of his people as he chanted:

"Say ye to the righteous, it shall be well with him: for they shall eat the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! It shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him . . .

"Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand! Howl, O gate; cry, O city; thou art dissolved."

In the last three choruses it was promised in more joyful notes to the righteous that "Ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace . . . Ye shall have a song, as in the night when a holy solemnity is kept."

McCrary's organ selections included Handel's Concerto in B flat No. 2, Prelude on "Now the Sun's Declining Rays," by Bruce Simonds; "Cortege and Litany," by Marcel Dupre; dige in the form of a Passacaglia, by Douglas Moore, and Toccata, by Frescobaldi.

Presented under direction of Count Kai de Vermond, with Mary Formwalt at the piano, and Louia Vaughn Jones as assistant conductor and concert master in charge of student orchestration, the rendition by colored university students proved an undertaking that tested all of their dramatic and operatic abilities.

To Ruth Logan, who appeared two years ago as Leonora in "Il Trovatore" and in the past two years as Marguerite in "Faust," Dr. Johnson presented a gold key on behalf of the opera committee for three years' successful work in this field.

Senate Passes Draft Limit

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday unanimously approved legislation authorizing deferment from Army training of all men who attain their twenty-eighth birthday by July 1, 1941.

Effect of the measure will be to lower the maximum draft age—now 35—to 27. Technically, men from 28 to 35 still would be registered for service and the President could rescind their deferment if conditions warrant. The status of men who have already been inducted would not be affected.

The plan is an amendment to the Selective Service Act passed last year. It is part of a bill still before the Senate, pending completion of action on a rider to permit the Government to operate strike-bound plants. The draft revision was sponsored by Senator Chan Gurney (Democrat), of South Dakota, and approved by Active Selective Service Director Gen. Lewis B. Hershey.

Senator Lister Hill (Democrat), Alabama, floor pilot of the measure, said there was "no doubt" that President Roosevelt would issue a blanket deferment for men in the 28-to-35 age bracket, but he conceded in response to inquiries that the bill makes such deferment directionary, not mandatory.

Europe Still Needs Imports

Complete control of the European continent would leave Germany "far from economically self-sufficient," the Brookings Institution reported yesterday on the basis of a study by Dr. Cleona Davis.

A Nazified Europe, according to the report, would be similar to old Germany with respect to foreign trade—a net importer of food and raw materials and a net exporter of manufactured goods.

But, says Dr. Davis, it would have to import substantially more raw materials than Germany did alone.

He adds: If the Nazi area were expanded beyond European boundaries to include all of the Mediterranean countries except Turkey, the economic unit would be somewhat better balanced. But it would still have to buy large quantities of raw materials and foodstuffs from the rest of the world and to export manufactured goods in payment.

Even if Russia were included in the area, Dr. Davis reports, the need to import foodstuffs and raw materials would not be greatly reduced under Russia's present production rate.

Dr. Davis makes no attempt to forecast the outcome of the present conflict nor its effects on the future political organization and administration of the area. Inherent advantages and handicaps revealed by past experience will remain, it is stated, whether the political organization and administration are such as to promote or to obstruct full utilization of resources.

Tobacco Fete Set

South Boston, Va., June 10 (AP).—The seventh annual National Tobacco Festival will be held here September 4 and 5, R. C. Edmunds, acting president, announced today.

Contract Bridge

Look only at the West cards of today's hand and study the bidding; then select an opening lead which you think may defeat South's six-spade contract.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ Q J 7 5 ♡ 10 ◇ K J 8 ♣ A K J 7 2
♠ 9 8 2 ♡ 7 4 3 ◇ A 7 4 3 ♣ Q 8 6	WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH	♠ 10 ♡ K 9 6 5 2 ◇ Q 9 8 6 ♣ 9 5 4
	♠ A K 8 4 3 ♡ A Q J 8 ◇ 10 2 ♣ 10 3

The bidding:

3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 NT	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

No opening lead.

Josephine Culbertson was sitting West when this hand was played. The situation appeared almost hopeless to her, as her club queen seemed worthless and any possible heart strength in her partner's hand would be under South, who had bid the suit. She finally decided that the diamond suit was her only chance. North's strong bidding probably placed him with the king, so Mrs. Culberston underled her diamond ace, hoping to find East with the queen. South played small from dummy, East won the queen, and a diamond returned to West's ace set the small-slam bid one trick.

SUPERMAN — Enigmatic Lil — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

I WON'T DISCONCERT YOU BY DESCRIBING TO YOU THE INTERESTING MANNER IN WHICH THESE DEVICES FUNCTION. I'LL JUST REMIND YOU THAT YOU'D BETTER LOSE NO TIME IN REVEALING SUPERMAN'S TRUE IDENTITY!
BUT I'VE NO IDEA WHO HE IS. AS A MATTER OF FACT, I HAVE NO REASON TO BELIEVE THAT HE HAS MORE THAN ONE IDENTITY!
MEANWHILE...
YOU SAY LOIS HAS BEEN KIDNAPPED—AND YOU KNOW WHERE SHE'S BEEN TAKEN?
YES, WE SHOULD BE THERE IN A FEW MINUTES.
BUT WHO ARE YOU, AND WHY ARE YOU TELLING ME THIS?
NEVER MIND WHO I AM. LOIS HAS BEEN KIDNAPPED BY BLOCK BECAUSE HE BELIEVES SHE KNOWS WHO SUPERMAN REALLY IS. I'M OUT TO DESTROY SUPERMAN MYSELF, BUT I DON'T INTEND TO SEE ANY INNOCENT PARTIES HURT IF I CAN HELP IT.

Maybe you hadn't thought about it before—maybe it isn't even worth thinking about—but it's funny about press agents, publicity men, public relations counsellors, or whatever else you choose to call the same thing.

Day after day, and lots of times night after night, they ply their curious trade, getting, or trying to get, attention in the public prints or on the radio for someone who doesn't seem to be able to do it him- or herself.

And yet their somewhat commercial charity never begins at home. They never seem to publicize themselves, or even want to. It seems curious, somehow. It's a selfless devotion—for a consideration, of course—that doesn't seem to pall as does most other devotion.

But tonight one of these shy gentlemen of the impress is to violate all the traditions by coming out and talking about himself, of all things. If, by chance, he should mention some of his accounts when you hear him on Fred Allen's show over WJSV at 8 p. m., you'll know that habit was just too strong for him—that he tried to keep it personal, but couldn't.

His name is Monty Proser and he's been a press agent for some of the best known night clubs in New York and Hollywood for years. Oddly enough he now owns several himself. We wonder what Monty will find to talk about—about himself.

Hull Explains Policy on Cape Verde, Azores

The Portuguese government has demanded an explanation of President Roosevelt's recent declaration that the Azores and Cape Verde Islands must not fall into Nazi hands and has been assured, in reply, that the United States "harbors no aggressive intentions" against any country, the State Department announced yesterday.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull was inflexible, however, in insisting that the United States asserts "the inalienable right of self defense and that danger would result to the Western Hemisphere if dictator nations seized the Portuguese-owned islands.

The formal note of Dr. Joao Antonio de Bianchi, the Portuguese Minister, dated May 30, was not released by the State Department, but it was said to be an urgent request for clarification of the President's remarks about the Portuguese islands.

President Roosevelt, in his May 27 broadcast, said the Nazis "have the armed power at the moment to occupy Spain and Portugal and and that threat extends to . . . the Azores and Cape Verde Islands."

Peril to U. S. Cited

The President declared at that time that the Nazis must not move any further westward toward any of the islands in the Atlantic and then he said:

"The Azores and the Cape Verde Islands, if occupied or controlled by Germany, would directly endanger the freedom of the Atlantic and our own physical safety."

Hull's reply to the Portuguese note was mainly a recapitulation of these points made by the President. There was nothing in Hull's note to indicate that the United States has changed its view that Germany must be kept from getting a foothold in the Azores and Cape Verdes.

The Hull note of reply, which was released by the State Department, assured Portugal that the United States wants only to live in peace.

The Secretary of State then warned Portugal against the "constantly expanding acts of aggression of a certain belligerent power, which now threaten the peace and safety of the countries of this hemisphere."

This was plainly a reference to Germany.

Strategic Importance

"In referring to the islands in the Atlantic," said Hull, "it was the intention of the rPesident to point out the dangers t othis hemisphere which would result if these islands were to come under the control or occupation of forces pursuing a policy of world conquest and domination. The strategis importance of these islands, because of their geographical location, was stressed by the President solely in terms of their potential value from the point of view of attack against this hemisphere."

Diplomatic quarters said that the Hull note detracted no force from the President's uncompromising warning to Germany not to make a move toward the Portuguese islands.

Hull was merely telling Portugal, these quarters said, that the United States has no wish to commit an aggressive act, but intends to act in its own defense, even if that means taking measures to keep the Azores and Cape Verdes out of Nazi hands.

It was the second time in recent months that the State Department has had to reply to a Portuguese request for "clarification" of the remarks of American officials.

Several weeks ago, when several Senators advocated seizure of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands, Lisbon asked for an official U. S. explanation and was told it had nothing to fear from the United States.

Portugal's policy, as outlined by Dr. Antonio Salazar, the Portuguese premier, is one of the strictest neutrality. In the view of some observers, Portugal was obligated under this policy to query the United States about its intentions regarding the strategic islands.

Due to this strict neutrality observed by Lisbon, American officials—much as they want to—have been unable to broach openly to the Portuguese Minister the question of safeguarding the islands against the possibility of a Nazi attack.

The known Portuguese attitude is that, despite its centuries-old friendship with Great Britain, it will not give the appearance of taking side with either belligerent in the present war. The Portuguese fear that favoritism to either side would invite invasion by the other belligerent.

Causes Are Given for Rejections

Approximately one of every ten local white selectees and one of every three colored selectees were rejected for physical defects at the induction stations during the month of May, according to statistics disclosed yesterday by local draft headquarters.

The report showed that of 561 white selectees sent to the Richmond induction station 61 were rejected. A percentage of 10.92. While of 332 colored selectees sent to the Baltimore induction station 110 were rejected. A percentage of 33.10.

The principal causes given in the report for rejection of the 61 white selectees were: Psychoneuroses (men temperamentally unsuited for military service), 22; hernia, 13; eye defects, 6, and dental defects, 5.

Reasons for rejection of the 110 colored selectees were given as mental deficiency, 25; gonorrhea, 25; illiteracy, 15; albuminoria and pyuria, 11, and syphilis, 8.

Lieut. Col. A. C. Gray, selective service medical officer who compiled the report said the rejection rates for reasons other than nervous and mental diseases, mental deficiency, illiteracy and the venereal diseases, are quite satisfactory. On the whole, he said, Washington's record is "better than the average."

The total number of selectees sent to induction stations during May was 893. According to the report 171 of these men were rejected. A percentage of 19.15.

Other causes for rejection were: Ear defects, varicose veins, hemorrhoids, musculo skeletal, heart disease, arterial hypertension chronic alcoholism, over or under weight, nasal and sinuses and acute illness.

Rooming House Operators Seek a 'Homey' Atmosphere

The groundwork of an association of Washington rooming house operators was laid yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

After hearing Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt tell how this group may be its bit by striving to make their Washington residence more "homey" for defense workers from out of town, the rooming house managers expressed enthusiasm for an organnization of their own.

A meeting will be called in the near future to perfect the plan, said Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association, who presided over the meeting.

Knudsen Will Speak

The problem of residential accommodations for defense workers throughout the country will come up this morning at the opening of a national housing inventory conference at the Hotel Mayflower. The first guest speaker will be William K. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management. He will be presented at 10 a. m., after the conference has been opened by Mrs. Dorothy Rosenman, chairman.

The Mayflower conference will be concluded tomorrow night with an address by Vice President Henry A. Wallace on "Housing for the Nation's Defense, Present and Future."

Speakers at the Y. W. C. A. meeting yesterday included Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator; John Ihlder, executive director of the District Alley Dwelling Authority; Howard Strong, home registration director in the division of defense housiog coordination; Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman of volunteer service in the District Defense Council, and Miss Caroline Ware, aide to Miss Harriet Elliott, director of the consumer division, Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

2,100 Dwellings Listed

Since the housing registry was opened on March 8 at 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, more than 2,100 dwellings have been listed as having one or more rooms to let, it was reported at the meeting. Mrs. Hoffman had high praise for the volunteer inspectors and renters of rooms who have cooperated to expedite housing of incoming defense workers.
